NEW FACILITIES HAVE MADE AIR TRAVEL SAFER

Teletype Weather Reports and Night Lighting Provide More Protection

EXTENDING SERVICE HAS COST MILLIONS

Latest Invention Will Help Flier to Guide Plane to Landing in Fog

This is the fifth of six articles on "Promoting Safety in the Air," which began Dec. 9.

One of the outstanding steps taken in the promotion of safety in air transportation has been the efforts of the Federal Government, which are still in progress, to provide adequate airways and to furnish them with night lighting systems, radio communication, frequent weather reporting service and radio beacon services.

Into this provision for new roads of the air the Government has literally poured millions of dollars, with the result that the country is now criss-crossed with broad air routes upon which air lines maintain frequent and largely uninterrupted services, solely because of the Government aids to navigation which are provided.

The extent to which the Government has added to its airways the same careful protection it accords to its waterways can be glimpsed by an air traveler starting out from New York City to make the interesting journey by air over the Alleghany Mountains to Cleveland, the first link in one of the two most important transcontinental air routes. From one end to the other the operation of the plan is controlled and regulated by the Government services.

Weather Conditions Gauged

In the first place, before the plane leaves the firm footing of the Newark Metropolitan Airport, within hearing of the rumble of New York City, the chances of favorable weather over the route have been gauged by Government weather experts, who obtain hourly reports of existing conditions by a teletype system of reporting.

Assured reasonably favorable weather, especially in the mountains, where some of the worst weather conditions encountered on any civil air line in the United States are to be found, the pilot of the passenger plane may take off, knowing that he is still flying under the wings of Government protection. Safely in the air, a radio operator reels out the plane's radio antenna and begins to listen in on the busy air radio traffic.

At Hadley Field, N. J., and at the Cleveland Airport two powerful radio stations are maintained to enable the pilot to keep in constant communication with conditions ahead. Should a sudden storm burst, the pilot may

Russian Envoy Takes Up Post in British Capital

By Radio from Monitor Bureau

LONDON—On the arrival of Gregory Sokolnikov, the new Soviet Ambassador to London, he was met by J. B. Monck, representing Arthur Henderson, Foreign Secretary, and the members of the staff of the Soviet trade organizations here.

In conversation, the Ambassador declared he had come determined to do everything in his power to restore the friendly relations between Great Britain and the Soviet Union. More than this he refused to say until he had seen Mr. Henderson. Arrangements will then be made for him to present his credentials to King George. This event will coincide with a similar action of Sir Esmond Ovey, the new British Ambassador to Moscow, in order that the promise to abstain from propaganda agreed to at the preliminary talks between Mr. Henderson and Valerian Dovgalevsky, Soviet Ambassador to Paris, can come into force simultaneously in both countries.

Mr. Sokolnikov has been a member of the Bolshevist Party since 1906. Imprisoned in 1907, he was then exiled to Siberia from whence he escaped and went to Paris where he studied economics and law at the Sorbonne. He was chairman of the delegation which signed the peace of Brest-Litovsk with Germany in 1917. As head of the Soviet oil syndicate he brought off a highly successful coup, making a deal for a sale of large quantities of oil to the Shell organization which is one of the principal British claimants against the Soviet Government in respect of oil properties nationalized at the time of the revolution. The question of the return of or compensation for these properties will be one of the most difficult he will have to face in the negotiation during the forthcoming months.

Scots' Hydroelectric Tests Are Successful

By Radio to The Christian Science Monitor

Edinburgh

THE final stage of the completion of the Lochaber-Inverness-shire hydroelectric scheme, started in 1925, was made this week when the water from subsidiary streams for testing purposes was let into the 15-mile tunnel which has been driven through the solid rock of the Ben Nevis range.

It permitted the turbines being run at full speed, and it is understood that the results were entirely satisfactory. A crucial test, however, cannot take place until the last rock barrier excluding the waters of Loch Treig from the tunnel has been blasted. It is expected this operation will be completed before the end of this month.

Grundy Seated in Vare's Place in Upper House

Resolution for Exclusion of Pennsylvanian Sent to Senate Committee

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON—After 3½ years Pennsylvania has once more its complement of representation in the United States Senate.

It has been a long and difficult path that the Commonwealth trod in arriving at senatorial "parity." The seat which he claimed was denied to a senator-elect on account of charges of excessive campaign expenditures and election frauds.

And even now, although two senators sit in its name in the chamber, the State's tribulations are by no means over—not by far.

For Joseph R. Grundy, wool goods manufacturer, Pennsylvania's newly installed junior Senator, although of most appealing personal charm and attributes, is politically very much of a problem.

Mr. Grundy took a leading part in the 1926 state campaign. He personally contributed heavily to the Mellon-Fisher-Pepper faction's fund and lent $300,000 more in an unsuccessful attempt to defeat William S. Vare, the man the Senate refused to enter on its rolls.

Referred to "Backward States"

And that is not all. Mr. Grundy has long been noted in Washington as an extreme high tariff lobbyist and so when the Senate set up a special committee to investigate lobbying it promptly sent for Mr. Grundy and examined his activities. Mr. Grundy was most outspoken before the committee; about the tariff and many other things, particularly his views about the shortcomings of the Constitution in granting small nonindustrial states, which he characterized as "backward states," senatorial representation equal to that of such mighty giants as Pennsylvania.

In fact, so candid was Mr. Grundy that overnight he became a most active campaign issue in Democratic and insurgent strongholds, much to the deep and disconsolate disturbance of Republican campaign chiefs. From the day that he aired his ideas before the committee, they have gone on echoing in political quarters.

They greeted him when he accompanied David A. Reed (R.), Senator from Pennsylvania, into the senatorial chamber, and laid his credentials before it, and they will continue to go on reverberating in and out of the Senate until the polls close on election day in November of next year.

Issue Becomes National

Mr. Grundy is today a national campaign issue. In him and his presence in the United States Senate Democrat and Progressive symbolize their opposition against the Republican Party. Mr. Grundy affords them a vivid example. His career, his activities, his own words are taken by

REICH'S BUDGET FOUND TO LACK 330,000,000 MARKS

Mueller Defends Financial Reforms—Schacht Backs Entire Tax Program

By Radio to The Christian Science Monitor

BERLIN—The Reichstag was filled in every part Dec. 12 for the speech of the Chancellor, Dr. Hermann Müller, on Germany's financial position and finance reform program. He spoke for nearly an hour, the main theme being that the Reich's budget at the end of December would be 1,700,000,000 marks, of which 330,000,000 was without backing, a statement which caused surprise throughout the house.

He stressed the fact that the reform program had not been accelerated by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht's memorandum, but it had been decided for a long time to bring it up before the Christmas recess.

He detailed the proposed reduction in certain direct forms of taxation such as the income tax, and the intended increase in taxation on beer, tobacco and unemployment insurance premiums to meet the 330,000,000 marks needed. The program also proposes levying a small per capita tax.

The Chancellor declared the situation grave, demanding quick decision, and he therefore begged the Reichstag to accept the program and give the Government its confidence.

Consultations of leaders of the parties continued without reaching unanimity. It cannot be denied that the situation is critical and a Cabinet crisis is not improbable.

Dr. Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, is in favor of acceptance of the entire program and considers it necessary to obtain a sinking fund in order to lessen the enormous floating debt. He believes the sum of 500,000,000 marks requisite, which for one year must remain for this purpose alone.

As Dr Schacht acts independently of the Government or the Reichstag, it is necessary to gain his good will for recommendation of credits and thus acceptance of the finance reform program in its entirety may become to many unwelcome coercion. Municipal financiers also need funds which probably will be obtained by raising the cost of gas, electricity and traffic 25 per cent.

Soviet Russia Curbs Peasants Eating Stores

By Radio to The Christian Science Monitor

MOSCOW — Many peasants who joined or plan to join the collective farms have been selling and eating their cattle and seeds apparently on the assumption that the state will provide for them in the future.

For the purpose of checking these practices, which are especially serious, in view of the pronounced meat shortage already obvious in the cities, the central organization of collective farms has issued rules whereby families selling cattle or seeds may be refused admittance into the collective farms or charged an entrance fee equivalent to what is sold, while an agitation is to be started within the collective farms for the transfer of cattle belonging to individual members to the ownership of the collective farm.

The importance of checking these practices, which are injurious to the productivity of the collective farms, is obvious in view of their phenomenal growth, their acreage being supposed to have increased eightfold in 1930, as compared with the preceding year. Collective and state farms will constitute 36 per cent of the planted acreage in Russia next year, if the Soviet agricultural plan is carried out.

Five Kulaks or rich peasants were sentenced to be shot in the Priluki region of Ukraine charged with carrying out anti-Soviet agitation, while a priest was shot in the town of Petropavolovsk, Siberia, being accused of a counter revolutionary agitation from the pulpit.

British Rhineland Troops 'Home' After Occupation of 11 Years

Commander Thanks Wiesbaden Officials and People for Courtesies Extended Under Trying Conditions —Difficult Duty Fulfilled Diplomatically

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

LONDON—The second battalion of the Royal Fusiliers who returned to London Dec. 12 from Wiesbaden were among the first units of the British army of occupation to reach the Rhine Dec. 13, 1918, and the last British contingent to leave after almost exactly 11 years.

"Happy to be home again" declared the troopers although many admitting regret at parting from German townspeople, among whom they established a reputation for justice, fair dealing and courtesy.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir William Thwaites, at the ceremony of hauling down the Union Jack, delivered an address in German following a friendly call upon the municipal authorities of Wiesbaden. Speaking from the steps of the Rathaus, the British commander said:

"I come with my staff in the name of the British army which I have had the honor to command in your beautiful Rhineland. I have come to take leave of you. With my departure the evacuation so far as it affects our army will be completed.

"Since we came into this zone you Germans and we English have worked together in delicate circumstances. It hasn't been pleasant to you and it hasn't been easy for us, but I feel we can congratulate each other upon our behavior to each other.

"On our part we have been fulfilling a duty. I have always endeavored to make the situation as easy as possible for you. It is not for me to say whether we have been successful or not. The ordinance of the Inter-Allied Rhineland army command have had to be complied with.

"In our official relations with you there always has been the greatest courtesy shown by the Prussian and Hessian governments. We have been very much aware of this courtesy. It has considerably helped to ease many difficult situations. The readiness of the German police to cooperate with the British military police has been recognized by us.

"Your police are a well-disciplined force whose courtesy always has been conspicuous. I can tell you it has been a pleasure to work with them in keeping public order in this area.

"We are naturally pleased to be going back to old England and to know we shall be taking up our normal duties once more. The memory of our long sojourn in your wonderful Rhineland will always remain with us. Our life here had helped us to understand the German people better. You on your part have learned to understand the sterling qualities of the British soldier.

"It is with expression of my most sincere wish for peace and good will for all time that I say to you farewell."

Wiesbaden will not be completely evacuated by the withdrawal of British, as the Interallied Rhineland High Commission will remain, presumably until June 30, 1930.

PRISON REFORM URGED AS GUARD AGAINST CRIME

Sanford Bates Advocates Education as Method of Improving Confined Men

WASHINGTON (AP)—Constructive prison reform methods are advocated by Sanford Bates, superintendent of federal prisons, as a means for protecting the public.

Public interest requires that prisons attempt to improve those men incarcerated, he said in a radio address. This could be accomplished, he said, "not by coddling, not by favoritism, not by an early release, not by senseless cruelty," but by removing physical handicaps, teaching a trade to eliminate pressure to commit crime, education and by release on parole under supervision.

He attributed the increase in the number of federal prisoners to recently added offenses against the federal law, in which he included those under the narcotic, prohibition and automobile theft laws.

"Without discussing the wisdom or unwisdom of such departures in the criminal field, we are confronted by a fact and not a theory," Mr. Bates said. "Whether there are to be further expansions along these lines depends upon Congress, but it is quite certain there will be no immediate diminution in the number of federal offenders.

"For relief from the present intolerable overcrowded condition, the Government must depend upon development of the probation system, transfer of drug addicts to specific institutions, erection of new institutions and reduce the chances of recidivism through constructive rehabilitation work in prison."

Mr. Bates said that the best solution of disciplinary problems was to keep the prisoners at work. It reduces the cost of maintaining the prison, he said, and makes the problem of rehabilitation easier.

In the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, he continued, only 800 inmates out of 3400 were provided with work in the badly overcrowded institution originally constructed to accommodate 1452 prisoners. Only two industries, he said, are provided at the Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary, where 1500 to 2000 inmates live in partial or complete idleness. This prison now has 3723 prisoners and was designed to accommodate 1500.

"Overwhelmed with the task of housing and feeding twice as many inmates as our penitentiaries should accommodate," Bates said, "the real work, personal reconstruction, has had

TARDIEU WINS SENATE TO BIG EXPANSION PLAN

Projects Raising France to World Leadership Revealed in Premier's Speech

By Cable to The Christian Science Monitor

PARIS—The Premier, André Tardieu, made use of his first appearance before the Senate since assuming office to deliver a rousing appeal to the French Nation. The country possesses, he declared, resources to an extent not appreciated, and their exploitation demanded the intelligent support of the Government.

The presence of M. Tardieu in the Senate was due to the need of that body authorizing expenditures incurred through the appointment of additional undersecretaries. The Senate, by 203 to 43, not only voted the sums, but indicated unmistakably its approval of the Government's policies.

M. Tardieu's statements were dramatic. It was time for optimism, he said. Excepting Russia, France is the largest country in Europe, and none is better situated. France has the second largest colonial empire. Looking back, he recalled how quickly France recovered after each catastrophe. Fifteen years after Waterloo came the conquest of Algeria. Fifteen years after Sedan, Tunis, Indo-China and West Africa were won. Seven years after Tangiers, France occupied Morocco. The last war returned Alsace-Lorraine, and in a decade France has raised itself from ruins.

Individuals criticized his optimism, M. Tardieu remarked. Instead, if Parliament would become more cohesive, cease its rapid making and unmaking of governments and rally behind the national projects, he could guarantee a splendid future for France. France was destined to be a world leader.

In his six weeks in office, M. Tardieu has already introduced notable measures. The Government intends that the fiscal year should commence on April 1 and is preparing to spend 5,000,000,000 francs on national productive enterprises. If he can find a way of assuring the Government a parliamentary majority over a reasonable space of time, France should certainly look forward to prosperous expansion.

RACING CONTROL ACT PASSED BY VICTORIA

Special from Monitor Bureau

MELBOURNE, Vic.—Accepting the view of the Nationalist Government that the present excessive number of horse racing meetings in the Melbourne metropolitan area was a social evil, the Victorian Legislative Assembly has passed a Racing Control Bill abolishing four race courses within the area and reducing the total number of meetings for the year by 34.

Introducing the bill, Dr. Argyle, the chief secretary, said that if race meetings were allowed to continue on almost every day of the week throughout the year they would became a menace to society. The people of Victoria had shown definitely that they considered there was too much week-day racing.

Following the example of Victoria, an agitation has also begun in Sydney (New South Wales) for less racing.

Right to Sleep Assured in Montreal's New By-Law

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

DRY LAW NEEDS HELP OF STATE SAYS DR. DORAN

Must Co-operate With Federal Forces, He Declares, for Best Results

Responsibility of individual states for the enforcement of prohibition is stressed in declarations of policy by the Federal Commissioner of Prohibition and by organizations favoring prohibition.

Dr. James M. Doran, in a statement to the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League, declares that the Federal Government alone cannot make prohibition enforcement effective without the co-operation of the states. Misinterpretation, he said, was responsible for published statements which declared that he felt the law placed no concurrent responsibility on the states.

In New York an effort to obtain reenactment of a state prohibition enforcement statute was launched by the League of Women Voters. The enforcement act, together with a proposal to allow women to sit upon juries, is a part of the state legislative program for which the organization will campaign.

In Washington the national conference of organizations supporting the Eighteenth Amendment adopted a resolution emphasizing the public's right to an active voice in legislative matters. Improper use of money to influence selfish legislation was condemned, but the resolution declared that legitimate activities on public questions by "public spirited" citizens should not be classed with objectionable lobbying.

Dr. Doran Declares States Obligated to Aid Dry Law

The states are under a direct obligation to enforce prohibition concurrently with the Federal Government, according to Dr. James M. Doran, Federal Commissioner of Prohibition, who has just issued a statement correcting the "misinterpretation" of his views.

In a letter to the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League, Dr. Doran corrects statements published recently in Boston that he believed that state enforcement would "make no difference" to the Federal Government.

"I am of the opinion," he said, "that the obligation to enact enforcement laws under the concurrent clause of the Eighteenth Amendment is equally obligatory upon the states, as well as upon the Federal Government. And I have stated so in several public addresses. I particularly stressed this obligation in an address I made before the Institute of Public Affairs at Charlottsville, Va., Aug. 17 of this year.

"The Federal Government will continue to exert its efforts in all states of the United States regardless of the action of the State, but it

Confidence Voted in Turkish Cabinet on Financial Issue

By Cable to The Christian Science Monitor

BEYOGLU, Turk.—The economic crisis caused by the depreciation of Turkish currency was the subject of discussion in Parliament, and Ismet Pasha, the Premier, after a speech lasting 40 minutes, obtained a vote of confidence in the Government. He was given authority to deal with the situation and to take any action that was considered necessary to effect the stabilization of the lira.

The Premier said that the Government had no intention of attempting to stabilize the lira by flooding the market with foreign currency, but rather would reduce the demand for the latter by forcing the employment of home-made articles in preference to foreign goods.

This, he explained would bring about a balance between imports and exports and thus result in the situation becoming normalized.

THE second of three great French air postal routes, across the Sahara to Madagascar, has been inaugurated. The first, to South America, was started last year, and the third, to French Indo-China, is to be put into operation soon. The opening of these routes is the result of years of preparation.

Naval Parley Prepares Way for World Pact

Arthur Henderson Foresees Next Assembly Summoning Disarmament Conference

By Radio from Monitor Bureau

LONDON—The hope that the next Assembly of the League of Nations will be able "to summon a general disarmament conference" at which a "world disarmament treaty will be finally drawn up" was expressed by Arthur Henderson, Foreign Secretary, at a dinner of the United Association of Great Britain and France.

The sequence of events as forecast by Mr. Henderson was the five-power naval conference in January, followed by a meeting of the League's Preparatory Disarmament Commission in the spring. "When that commission has done its work we shall report to the next Assembly and the next Assembly will, I believe, be able to summon a general conference."

The tasks are difficult, he added, and not less so "because we start upon them with the knowledge that unless we can carry them through to success in all their stages we shall do nothing that will endure."

Mr. Henderson continued: "I have said that the five power conference is only part of the process which we must carry to an end. We have to hold this five power conference for a simple reason. There are five nations in the world, whose navies are more powerful than the rest. Without their agreement about naval disarmament nothing can be done. But in the discussions of the preparatory commission at Geneva, it was found that the delegates of these five nations could not agree. They differed not about the purpose but about the methods by which naval disarmament could be brought about. The preparatory commission is therefore asked to meet to discuss their difference among themselves and that is why the conferences are being held."

American Delegation to Go Direct to London

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON—The prospect that the American delegation will sail to the London Naval Conference on the five-day liner Bremen has raised the question of whether it will pay a flying visit to the French capital en route. At his conference with the press Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, stated that under present plans the delegation would go directly to England. No invitation has been received from any other country for an intermediate stop, Colonel Stimson explained.

The series of gatherings of American naval delegation continued in the State Department. At the latest meeting lasting nearly three hours, the two Senators, Joseph Robinson (D.), Senator from Arkansas, and David A. Reed (R.), Senator from Pennsylvania, were absent, being busy with legislative matters in the Senate. Other delegates now in Washington were present.

An unexpected call was paid on Colonel Stimson by Elihu Root, in the capital in connection with the annual meeting of the Carnegie Endowment.

"The so-called Root formula is not a compromise" was the only comment of the veteran statesman, when inquiring reporters asked him to discuss opposition of irreconcilable senators to the project.

REBELS BEATEN BACK—CHIANG EMERGES VICTOR

Nanking President Refuses All Compromise With Leaders of Revolt

MENACE OF MUTINY MOVED FOR PRESENT

Situation Turns on Yen Hsi-shan's Attitude—Loyalty Shown in Letters

By Cable to The Christian Science Monitor

SHANGHAI—Despite the threatening proportions of the revolt, the Nanking Government appears to have weathered the storm, resulting in a considerable easing of tension during the last week.

This is due to Chiang Kai-shek's determined stand against the rebels and his refusal to accept the compromise which was offered as a price to save the Government. His position is strengthened by the failure of the rebel movement north of Pukow to develop and the decisive blow struck against the rebels of the Canton area, where Government troops have driven back the rebels and removed the menace for the time being.

A more important factor rests in the attitude of Yen Hsi-shan, "model" Governor of Shansi Province, which Nanking claims is one of loyalty to the Government and influencing other northern leaders in favor of Nanking.

Substantiating this claim Nanking on Dec. 13 issued the text of letters exchanged between Chiang Kai-shek and Yen Hsi-shan in which the latter declares he awaits Nanking's orders. Confident of returning strength and satisfied with the military aspect of the situation, Chiang Kai-shek refused to accept the compromise which Wang Ching-wei, leader of the Left, offered at the beginning of the revolt, and which appeared to be the only solution calculated to maintain the structure of the National Government at Nanking.

The Kuomintang central executive acted on this decision by ordering Wang's expulsion from the party. This removed immediate danger of the establishment of a separate government at Canton, which was threatened by Wang. Nanking now declares that Canton is firmly held by government troops.

Official reports declare that Nanking military authorities are preparing to launch an offensive to suppress the revolts in the Hankow area and north of Pukow, and judging from the Government's position, the move is liable to succeed.

No News of Missionaries

SHANGHAI (AP)—No reports have come in as to the American missionaries at Kanchow, Kiangsi Province, which recently was reported overridden by Communist armies. The last message received here from Kanchow, Nov. 30, said that cities about Kanchow had been captured by the Reds and that the situation was serious.

The missionaries, attached to the Lazarus mission there, appealed for the protection of Nationalist troops, and asked that their request be taken up with the consular authorities. Headquarters of the missions are at Germantown, Pa.

MUKDEN, Manchuria (AP)—An official statement declares that the Soviet forces are continuing their military operations in western Manchuria. The Russians are said to have bombed Chinese positions in Pokoto, or Ebukedu, in the Khingan Mountains.

All America Hears Marconi in London

NEW YORK (AP)—Senator Guglielmo Marconi addressed America from London by radio Dec. 12, the 28th anniversary of his first spanning the Atlantic by a radio signal.

Instead of the clumsy receivers and transmitters used in those early days to send across the three simple dots that make the easier letter, "S," in code, his voice was carried by elaborate short wave and radiocast equipment.

Besides, all of America could listen in through a National Broadcasting Company network of 46 stations extending as far west as Salt Lake City instead of a shivering inventor and his aide breasting a gale on the bleak coast of Newfoundland.

His talk, a recital of his thrilling experiences of Dec. 12, 1901, was climaxed by the prediction of great things still ahead for radio, including "even the transmission of power over moderate distances."

"I must leave to your imaginations," he said, "the uses which can be made of these new powers. They probably will be as wonderful as anything we have experienced so far."

The reradiocast, NBC officials said, was the most successful of any of those yet made from England. There was only a slight trace of fading here and there, with static considerably in the background.

WORLD RAILWAY FAIR IS OPENED IN CHILE

SANTIAGO, Chile (By U. P.)—The International Railroad Exposition was formally opened here Dec. 12 with delegates from the Third South American Railroad Congress in attendance.

The official organizing committee of the congress was taken for a short ride behind the first locomotive ever used in South America. The engine was used on the Caldera-Copiapo Railroad in 1850.

Nation Needs Weather Forecasters; Bureau Has Jobs for Trained Men

WASHINGTON (AP) — The expansion of aviation activities has so greatly increased the demand for weather forecasts that the weather bureau is unable to find enough trained men to meet its new requirements for safeguarding life and property.

Dr. Charles F. Marvin, chief of the bureau, testified before the House appropriations subcommittee for agriculture that the work of forecasting aviation weather has grown to such an extent that "we are up against it, in a certain sense, for trained men to do this work."

"The rapid expansion in the work of the weather bureau," Dr. Marvin said, "due to the fruit-frost, weather observation distribution, fire-weather and aviation programs, especially the latter, has created a situation in regard to forecasters which is serious."

He said the bureau wanted to train men to be able to give forecasts and weather advice to pilots, because "it involves lives and property." The demand, he predicted, would continue to grow with the development of aviation.

Hearings on the agricultural bill also brought out that furfural, a plastic substance made from oat hulls, and suitable for use in manufacturing door knobs, penholders, bases for radio tubes, inkstands, varnish, electric fixtures, airplane parts and telephone mouthpieces, has been developed by the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils in the Department of Agriculture. This was revealed by Dr. Henry G. Knight, chief of the bureau.

A large firm that prepares oats for breakfast cereal is now producing 50 tons of furfural daily, which is being used in making varnishes and plastics, he said.

Dr. Kelly exhibited to the committee an ash tray, a cup and other articles which he said were made by mixing the furfural with cornstalk flour and carbolic acid. Development of the substance has been carried to the point where it can be produced commercially at a very low cost, he said.

Novel Scene in Old London Palace as Press Prepares for Navy Parley

By Radio from Monitor Bureau

LONDON—Scores of journalists in London, representing newspapers published in various parts of the world, attended the "press inspection" on Dec. 12 at St. James's Palace, where the five-power naval conference opens on Jan. 21 for eight to ten weeks' deliberations.

Escorted by officials of the British Foreign Office and Department of Works, the writers were first shown the facilities to be accorded them for handling dispatches covering the news developments of the big parley. Excellent arrangements are being made for their convenience in the historic palace, built by Henry VIII between 1530 and 1532. These include a long gallery "workshop" with a colonnade filled with rare oil paintings, equipped desks, typewriters, chairs, a refreshment counter, a telephone room in which 50 booths for local, continental and American calls are being provided.

Ascending the main stairway, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, containing among others a baby picture of George, Prince of Wales, later George III, the journalists were shown into the "guard room," the walls and ceilings bristling with swords, derringers, daggers, pipe staves and shields, where the cable and telegraph companies are to operate special wires to which writers will have access. Tradition says it was in this room that Charles I slept on the night before his execution.

Plenary sessions of the conference will be held in the Royal Gallery in the House of Lords. The state rooms at St. James's Palace will be used for daily committee meetings, a purpose for which their quiet and seclusion admirably fits them.

Queen Anne's drawing room, designed by Wren and floridly decorated by Kent in the middle of the eighteenth century, its walls covered with portraits of Kings and Queens by Lely, Kneller, Reynolds and others, is where all the delegates will assemble daily around the conference table.

The Throne Room beyond, where the King stands under a canopy when he receives, and a dozen other chambers are to be used as committee rooms.

St. James's Palace has been the scene of international diplomacy on several previous occasions. The peace conference after the Balkan war met there not long before the World War, and in 1919 the Council of the League of Nations held its sittings in Queen Anne's drawing-room.

WASTE BASKET POTENT FACTOR IN INDUSTRY

Humble Receptacle Helps Support Business of More Than $200,000,000 a Year

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—That the waste-paper basket is an important factor in industry may be gathered from the fact that in recent years a business of more than $200,000,000 a year is being carried on in the United States from what goes into the basket. Millions of tons of merchandise are being salvaged and made to work over and over again.

Many years ago in the printing and bookbinding shops "shavings" and "clippings" from book and magazine edges were sent back to the paper mills and turned into usable stock. The waste basket in the office is now a business asset.

New York's skyscrapers supply an enormous amount of waste paper. In the basement of the Woolworth building there is a great power-baling machine into which the janitors pour the daily grist from the hundreds of offices extending 50 stories above the ground. After about three days it is baled and sent to the buyer.

Paper from book binderies and printing shops that is clean and fairly uniform in quality is made over again into print paper, usually for magazines, books and some grades of wrapping paper. Newspapers, of which thousands of tons are collected weekly from the subway and suburban trains, the philanthropic agencies which make a specialty of this class of collection, and from newsdealers' unsold copies, are sent to the mill in bulk to be "deinked" and used for packing boxes, cartons and various containers. This stock is seldom usable for newsprint again unless mixed with fresh wood pulp. The exacting requirements of newspapers for a clean, uniform quality and color, however, usually call for entirely fresh wood pulp stock.

The growth of the chain grocery stores in recent years has called for an enormous increase in the use of package goods. Few commodities are now sold in bulk in these stores and not only is the individual package made of waste paper products, but the cartons in which the packages are shipped are of a kindred material. Municipal laws regulating the household disposal of waste require, in a great many cases, that household waste be separated. This means that the waste paper is receivable again in a comparatively free form and goes merrily on its way to the paper mill where it starts another cycle.

What may start out as a fine quality of writing paper, made originally from "choice rag stock," may end up as fiber building board, tar paper, coarse wrapping stock, containers for cement, plaster and fertilizers and even with such a seemingly inglorious end, its usefulness in some new service is possible.

The largest percentage of waste paper is that from the binderies and periodical publishing houses, such as the Saturday Evening Post and similar publications where the circulation runs into millions. The waste in these houses has been reduced in recent years, however, by the application of mechanical methods that reduce trimmings to a minimum. Probably the next largest salvagable sources of supply are from newspapers and the third from the office waste baskets. The large merchandising houses, both retail and wholesale, also contribute a vast amount of waste paper.

Japan to Conduct Research in China

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—A cultural plan for China, under which Japan will spend 3,000,000 yen annually, was described by Katsuji Debuchi, Japanese Ambassador to the United States, at a luncheon given by the American Asiatic Association at India House. The sum to be expended on the program is the annual interest on a permanent fund of 92,000,000 yen, comprising 72,000,000 yen from the Boxer indemnity fund and 20,000,000 yen of the sum which China paid to Japan under the Shantung treaty.

The larger part of the yearly expenditures will be on two research institutes, one in Peiping and one in Shanghai, Mr. Debuchi said. Philosophy, religion, literature and the arts will be studied at the Peiping institute, and promotion of the natural sciences will be the chief aim of that at Shaighai.

Besides supporting auxiliary social service activities, he continued, the fund is used to promote personal contacts and interchange of educational ideas between Japan and China.

MEXICO TAKES CENSUS OF 'FEDERAL DISTRICT'

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

MEXICO CITY—The "federal district," which includes Mexico City and surrounding villages, has a total of 100,357 houses, according to an official census, and of this number the capital city has 62 per cent.

Only 95 per cent of the communities have responded with their figures and those missing belong to isolated districts where communication is difficult. The data will be used by the Treasury Department in its computation of Mexico's national wealth, and will also be used in the taking of the population census which will be started early in 1930. The present census, just beginning, is the most complete stock-taking of its people, industries, agriculture, and national wealth the Mexican Government has ever attempted.

Congress Called on to Back Hoover Plan

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—The Union League Club calls on Congress to emulate the President, the Secretary of the Treasury and business generally in the movement for national prosperity. The club declares it "is deeply impressed by the demonstration of sound business conditions that has been made, under President Hoover's leadership, by the industries and the railroads of the country" and it "shares the President's confidence that the present high level of prosperity is to continue."

The club holds that "wages and, therefore, consuming power are not to be reduced, and the measures of co-operation and of sustained industrial activity already agreed upon should be pursued until confidence, lessened by the recent drastic decline in security prices, has been restored."

The resolution declares that the club believes the country is entitled to an equally "remarkable and satisfactory" response from the Senate and House of Representatives in Washington.

CONSERVATION CHIEF CHOSEN IN NEW YORK

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—Charles D. Osborne, Democrat and Mayor of Auburn, has been selected by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for appointment as commissioner of conservation to succeed Alexander Macdonald, and his nomination will go to the Legislature when it meets in January, according to persons in high political quarters here. Mr. Osborne is the son of the late Thomas Mott Osborne, internationally known penologist and one-time warden of Sing Sing Prison.

The position of Conservation Commissioner is one of the most important in the administrative branch of the State government. It exercises control on leases for hydroelectric sites and supervision over the big public park system and forest preserves.

must be obvious that satisfactory enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment cannot be had unless the State discharges its obligation equally with the Federal Government.

"It seems that the inference has been drawn that I am of the opinion that it would make no difference whether any State had enforcement legislation or not. The facts are that it will make no difference so far as the Federal Government is concerned, as it will continue to discharge its obligations in so far as it can in all states, but if the State itself fails in this respect the effect on law enforcement will be bad.

"I do not believe that the states themselves would welcome the detail policing of all their local affairs by the Federal Government. The answer, therefore, seems obvious, namely, the State should discharge its full obligation under the Eighteenth Amendment in order that the purposes expressed by the amendment may be fully carried out throughout the land."

Workers for Enforcement Meet in Two-Day Session

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

WASHINGTON — The conference of organizations supporting the Eighteenth Amendment has been holding a two-day session in Washington. The conference represents 31 national bodies, most of which were represented. In addition to a discussion of policy and methods, certain changes in organization were considered. The Executive Committee was enlarged and the secretary and treasurer are to be permitted to hold over.

No meeting of the conference will be held until next year, unless conditions arise which will make it necessary to call a special meeting. This can be done by the Executive Committee, which will hold meetings during the year.

Officers present at the session here include Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president W. C. T. U., president; F. Scott McBride of the anti-Saloon League, and Oliver W. Stuart of the Flying Squadron, vice-presidents; Edwin C. Dinwiddie, secretary, and P. H. Martin, treasurer.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Barton, chairman of the Committee of Social Service and superintendent of Department of Church Extension of the Home Mission Board, Southern Methodist convention, presented the following resolution which was adopted:

"The improper use of money or influence in any form by selfish and sinister persons or organizations for corrupt ends with the public servants of the people, whether legislative, judicial or executive, cannot be too strongly condemned or too promptly uncovered and punished.

"On the other hand, the right of petition and remoustrance is happily and securely embodied in the Bill of Rights, is one of the prime marks distinguishing a democracy from an autocracy or oligarchy, and is one of the foundation stones and safeguards of our Republic.

"To characterize the exercise of this right as 'lobbying' in no way alters or abrogates the right as one of the guarantees of our liberties. Honest, patriotic, public-spirited citizens, both as individuals and by groups and organizations, have the inalienable right to make their will concerning any matter of public policy known to their public servants.

"It will be a sad day for us, and will mark the day of the decline, if not of the doom, of our Government when our public servants are too weak to resist the corrupt and corrupting lobbyist who would turn aside from the path of duty and right, or when they are too proud to hear and consider the judgment, will and desires of good and honest citizens and organizations properly and appropriately expressed.

"Citizens and organizations of worthy, patriotic and unselfish motives and purposes, who seek the good of the people, and of the Republic, have nothing to cover or to conceal, and nothing to fear, from the searchlight of publicity, whenever turned on.

"Let those who would turn on the searchlight be sure that it is so directed as to reveal the activities and operations of individuals and organizations who are openly committed to a course of defiance of, and rebellion against, the established policies of the Government, and who would make barter of the health, happiness and prosperity of the people."

New York Women Demand State Enforcement Law

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

ALBANY, N. Y.—A program of proposed legislation, including a state law for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, was submitted to the New York League of Women Voters at its tenth anniversary convention, just opened here.

The program, which was presented to the convention by Mrs. J. Leslie Tompkins, legislative chairman, was accepted by the league's state committee at a pre-convention session, at which Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach of New York, state chairman, presided. The recommendations will be acted upon by the delegates later.

Besides a state enforcement law, the program asks legislation opening the jury box to women, a statute which would replace the present inadequate care of the dependent aged by providing regular financial allowances for them, provision for the extension of the benefits of the Workman's Compensation Law, approval of a change in the election law to permit the permanent registration of voters in all towns and cities, a four-year term for Governor, with election in non-Presidential years; a fair wage law and a measure to develop further free state employment bureaus.

Caleb H. Baumes (R.), Senator of Newburgh, addressing the women Voters, defended the crime laws bearing his name and declared himself in favor of placing first offenders on probation, stating that he would give every man, young or old, a chance as long as there seemed a possibility of his reformation.

Mr. Baumes announced that the crime commission will recommend an expenditure of $30,000,000, with $12,000,000 available at once to carry out a program of prison improvement and construction, the recent attempted outbreaks having focused attention on the need for immediate reconstruction in existing prisons and construction of new ones.

"Until there is a cell for every prisoner and overcrowding and idleness cease, there will be riots," he said. "The State owes it to its prison wards to provide each with a sanitary cell, plenty of wholesome food and sufficient light, air, and exercise. It should do something to better fit him to earn his living and become a useful citizen."

John B. Andrews, secretary of the American Association for Labor Legislation, declared that those closest to the problem agree that state old-age pensions are the most economical and humane means of dealing with non-institutional aged dependents.

FIRST CRUISER LAUNCHED

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The 10,000-ton cruiser Salt Lake City was placed in commission at the Philadelphia Navy Yard Dec. 11, with all the ceremony prescribed by naval regulations. The ship is the first of the eight cruisers authorized in 1924 to be placed in active service.

JUVENILE-HOME COURTS BACKED IN LAW REFORM

Virginia Judge Tells Boston Audience of Results in Reuniting Families

Adequate systems of special juvenile and domestic relations courts were advocated as the best means of dealing with delinquency and crime at its source by Herbert G. Cochran, judge of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court of Norfolk, Va., speaking to the Women's City Club in Boston and the child welfare conference of the Cambridge League of Women Voters and the Cambridge Union of Social Workers.

"Since establishment of the Juvenile Court in Norfolk, the amount of serious crime in that city has been reduced by half," Judge Cochran declared.

"Less than 1 per cent of those who have been in the Juvenile Court have persisted in criminal careers as adults," he said. "This is a very remarkable record in contrast with the fact that 60 per cent of those who are dealt with in our criminal courts are 'repeaters.'"

Jails Breed Crime

The practice of sending children to jail for detention before hearing in court was condemned by Judge Cochran. He urged that they be sent to proper detention homes instead. "Jails," he said, "are incubators of crime. They defeat the very purpose for which they are intended."

Judge Cochran praised the system now in effect in Virginia, under which there is in every county a juvenile court which is also a court of domestic relations. Hundreds of reconciliations and settlements between estranged and separated parents have been effected by these courts, he said, thus re-establishing homes for the children and tending to check delinquency at its source.

"Perhaps the most important and most effective method of the court," said Judge Cochran, "is the probation system. By this method the ideas and conduct are controlled, changed and reformed by bringing to bear upon him the better influences and forces of the community."

Herbert C. Parsons, speaking at the child welfare conference, urged that Massachusetts at least carefully examine the program of state-wide juvenile court systems which other states have found so successful. He pointed out that there is only one juvenile court, as such, in Massachusetts today, compared with other states which often have one in every county. Ohio, for example, has 91 such courts.

Delinquency Decreasing

Judge Arthur P. Stone of the Middlesex County District Court, speaking on the same program, declared that in his opinion there was no need for additional juvenile courts in this State. The present system, under which juvenile cases are handled by the regular district courts, has, he claimed, proved entirely efficient. During the last 10 years juvenile delinquency has decreased in Massachusetts, he said.

He recommended that the Children's Commission press for the erection of an institution for girls to which judges can commit young girls for offenses other than those falling in the sex category. There was a need, he said, for the segregation of such cases.

The work of the Children's Commission was outlined at the conference by Theodore A. Lothrop, its chairman. "School offenders and truancy" was the subject of an address by Alfred F. Whitman, executive secretary of the Boston Children's Aid Association. He urged the abolishing of the present system of truant schools in Massachusetts, declaring that their effect is often to harm rather than help young children, and that their great expense was not justifiable.

Tree Growth Linked to Trade Expansion

WASHINGTON — Planning of a $10,000,000,000 trade expansion program by American business brings to the front, as nothing else could, the importance of taking stock of forest resources, according to Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree Association. This expansion program, he points out, means one of the biggest calls industry has ever made on the Nation's lumber supply.

Each year, he states, the world cuts about 56,000,000,000 cubic feet of timber, while foresters have estimated that only about 38,000,000,000 cubic feet are grown in the same periods. This is the condition which must be considered when planning lumber's part in the business expansion, he asserts.

"About one-sixth of our original forest land now bears virgin timber," states Mr. Pack. "In three centuries our forests have retreated westward, and are now so distant from the centers of demand that today we pay $250,000,000 as our yearly freight bill to transport wood from the far-off forest to the lumber yard."

Mr. Pack advises that timber growth must balance with timber use, that barren hillsides must be planted to trees to protect the soil against floods, and all idle land must be put to work growing trees.

STEALS ACTOR'S LINE: PARROT BANISHED

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—Because he "stole" a fellow actor's lines fairly out of his mouth, an aspirant to fame in talking pictures lost his job. The banished actor was a parrot who occupied a gilded cage on the front porch of a ranch house where a unit from Paramount's Hollywood studios was shooting scenes.

The action called for a small boy, Nestor Aber, to pound upon the front door and shout, "Mother, can I come in?" While the scene was rehearsed several times, Polly sat silent in his cage. Then the cameras and sound recording apparatus were synchronized and the director, George Abbott, shouted "Camera!"

Beating young Aber to it, Polly queries shrilly, "Mother, can I come in?" Banishment of the ambitious bird followed.

STOP GAMBLING IN STOCKS FIRST, SAYS ALABAMAN

Mobile's Plans for Aiding in Hoover Prosperity Drive Is Told by Mayor

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

MOBILE, Ala.—Plans for building a $1,000,000 auditorium and city hall in this city have been submitted to the city authorities by the president of the American Trust Company and it is expected that building will be started early in the new year, according to Harry T. Hartwell, Mayor of this city and president of the Alabama League of Municipalities, who has expressed hearty concurrence with President Hoover's prosperity plan for stabilization.

"I am appealing to the mayors in 250 cities in this State to go forward promptly with whatever plans they have under consideration," he said.

"As an evidence of our local interest in meeting this situation, the board of commissioners of the city of Mobile sold $700,000 city of Mobile improvement bonds to the American Trust Company of this city, to complete our present $2,000,000 paving venture. We have just completed the installation of approximately 20 miles of 'white way' at a cost of $175,000; water works and sewer extensions at a cost of $400,000 and we hope early in the spring of 1930 to let a contract for another $2,000,000 paving venture.

"A $3,000,000 hotel will be erected during 1930 by Jason Malbis; legislation will be enacted next year to give us the right to build a sea wall and driveway along the western shore of Mobile Bay from the city to the Gulf of Mexico at a cost of approximately $12,000,000; our county commissioners are now engaged in the expenditure of $8,000,000 for the building of 250 miles of hard-surfaced roads throughout the county, and they have under consideration the building of a new modern courthouse and jail at a cost of $1,000,000; we have just completed at this port the building of a $10,000,000 state-owned dock terminal development, and our Board of Education recently completed the building of a $1,000,000 high school, and will invest approximately $1,000,000 in other new schools within the next two years.

"While I am strongly in favor of the President's appeal, I am also strong for the removing the cause that brought about this very unusual condition in our American life, and this can only be accomplished by national legislation prohibiting the dealing on the stock exchange in futures. This method of gambling should be abolished. It is all right to stabilize business after the crash, but what about the wreckage?

"There has been no loss of confidence in business; the loss of confidence has rather been in our speculative system."

CULTIVATION BETTER THAN CHEMICAL USE

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

EDMONTON, Alta.—As a result of experiments in weed eradication carried on this year by the Department of Agriculture, the Advisory Weed Board of Alberta has reached the conclusion that certain chemicals now on the market have a definite value as a control measure in checking the spread of noxious weeds.

While the Weed Board recommended the chemicals containing chlorates as a control measure on places where cultivation was difficult or impossible, such as in ditches and around lakes, yet they found the chemical treatment was more expensive and less effective than thorough cultivation, where this latter could be carried out.

LIBERALS MOVE REJECTION OF LABOR COAL BILL

MacDonald Cabinet Hopes to Weather Storm—Conservatives Undecided

By Radio from Monitor Bureau

LONDON—The Liberals, headed by David Lloyd George and Sir Herbert Samuel, have given notice of an amendment for the rejection of the Government's coal bill. This amendment, if carried, would mean the Government's defeat upon the major issue with the possible result of another general election. As the Liberals hold the balance of power in the House of Commons this contingency is much discussed here, but it is not the Liberals' intention to throw out the Government and the amendment is being carefully drafted to avoid such a result, which neither branch of the Opposition desires.

The wording is such that the Conservatives find themselves unable to vote for it. It includes, for example, an expression of approval for such features in the Government's measure as the reduction of miners' hours and the establishment of a wages board, which the Conservatives oppose. If the Conservatives were anxious to defeat the Government they might still attempt to do so by themselves moving the concluding portion of the Liberal amendment, which declares that the bill "would subsidize coal supplied to competing manufacturers abroad while increasing the price of coal to British industries and imposing a heavy burden on consumers in general."

But in this case, it is understood the Liberals would stand aside. Confidence is therefore felt in Government circles that the bill can be got through. The only question is to what extent the amendments may have to be accepted to meet the opposition's chief points, which are that as now drafted it means dearer coal at home and the preservation of uneconomic pits which ought, in the industry's best interests to disappear. Neither those influential Liberals, Walter Runciman nor Sir Donald MacLean have appended their names to Mr. Lloyd George's amendment, though they attended the party meeting at which the decision was taken to move it. Their views are understood to be that no definite action should be taken until the government has had an opportunity of explaining how far it is prepared to go toward meeting the objections.

The Conservatives have not yet decided their line of action, though they generally oppose the bill. Even the Conservatives, however, are divided. Lord Melchett, a Conservative, speaking here, while strongly opposing the reduction of working hours, declared in favor of that portion of the bill which provides for the setting up of a marketing board to control prices and output.

Herbert Samuel has stated the Liberals' position when he said that the bill contained "no constructive ideas." He also took exception to its "omission to secure better organization," and said that "exported coal is to be made artificially cheaper at the expense of our own consumers." He estimated the rise it would effect in the price of coal at home at 3s. per ton.

The Federation of British Industries, a powerful national organization representing British manufacturers has published a protest against the measures being put through without a fuller consultation of the vast interests concerned. Yorkshire coal owners on the other hand have come out with a memorandum supporting the measure, thus setting themselves in opposition to the majority of owners in other British fields. The miners generally now support the bill.

Canadian Car-Owners Object to High Prices

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

OTTAWA, Ont.—Users of automobiles in Canada receive the full benefit of tax reductions, according to John Bain, Ottawa representative of an American motor company in Canada, in giving evidence in the investigation of the Advisory Board on Tariff and Taxation into the question as to whether the automobile manufacturers had passed on to the consumer the reduction of 5 per cent excise tax on cars under $1200.

While he admitted that there had been considerable criticism on account of the marked difference between the relative list prices of American and Canadian cars, he said that "one of the basic principles of manufacturing economics is that volume definitely affects cost. Having this in mind, it cannot be reasonably expected that, even granted all other factors being equal, the Canadian manufacturer of automobiles can produce as cheaply as the United States manufacturer, with his immensely greater volume of production."

With the object of further encouraging the manufacture of automobiles in Canada, Mr. Bain urged that in lieu of, and in substitution for the drawback of 25 per cent on imported materials and parts, provision be made for a discount of such 25 per cent to be taken from the face of the customs duty; that all articles used in such manufacture which are not made in Canada be admitted free of duty, and not only certain specified articles as at present; and that the rate of duty on parts for repair or renewal should be 22½ per cent instead of an average rate now payable of 30 per cent.

The investigation is due to the objection of users of small cars to paying 34 per cent more than they would for the same cars in the United States when the protecting tariff is only 20 per cent. The manufacturers assert that the difference is only 25 per cent.

LOW PRICE OF COTTON UNDER INVESTIGATION

WASHINGTON (AP)—Opening its investigation of cotton trading on the New York, Chicago and New Orleans exchanges, a Senate agriculture subcommittee heard Gardiner H. Miller, president of the New York Cotton Exchange, testify that activities on the exchanges were not responsible for the low price for cotton in recent months.

Mr. Miller, the first witness, asserted that this year's price level had been a "true reflection" of the law of supply and demand. The depressed price, he said, was caused by a large world production combined with rapid marketing of the domestic crop "at a time when the spinning industry was depressed."

INDIAN HELPS HIS FELLOW MEN FIND POSITIONS

Government Service Uses Shoshone as Adviser in Employment Work

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON — A full-blooded Shoshone Indian who has shown remarkable ability in persuading his fellow men to go to work in the industrial shops of the West is in Washington to advise the Indian Service in its plans for setting up a $50,000 Indian employment service.

A year ago the Indian Service's attention was called by the Union Pacific Railway to George P. LaVatta who in the 10 years that he had worked in their shops at Pocatello, Ida., had not only risen from a menial job to one which put him in charge of the welfare of a large section of employees, but had brought numerous Indians to work in the shops and along the routes of which he was in charge. The Government was quick to see the value of such a man in the Indian Service and appointed LaVatta as "Overseer of Indian Employment" with headquarters in Salt Lake City.

Mr. LaVatta, in his governmental position, establishes contacts with railroad and other industrial officials in a number of western states and gets their promise to let him know when they have vacancies that Indians can fill. Meanwhile he makes visits to Indian schools and reservations and lines up prospects for the jobs.

With his fervent zeal, LaVatta is able to go among the Indians and talk to them in terms which, if used by the white man, would only leave them sullen and irresponsive. Recounting a meeting he had with one group of institute graduates, idle and asking for rations, LaVatta points out that he called each one to account individually, berating them for their laziness. "The trouble with you," he told them, "is you're too proud to start in a lowly job." After the meeting every one of the boys crowded around to shake hands with him, eager to know where the job could be found, LaVatta says.

Ortiz Rubio Seeks Bond of Friendship With United States

NEW YORK (AP)—President-elect Ortiz Rubio of Mexico radiocast his first public statement to the people of the United States in a good-will message over a Nation-wide network.

"I have been for many years a sincere admirer of this great Nation for the heights it has attained, which constitutes a proud accomplishment for all the inhabitants of this continent," he said in clear English.

"I believe it is indispensable for the prosperity of both countries to strengthen more and more the ties of friendship which unite us on a basis of mutual respect. I hope with all my heart that the prosperity of the United States continues its brilliant ascent because the prosperity of the United States contributes to the prosperity of America and the prosperity of America signifies sooner or later the prosperity of humanity."

MRS. ROOSEVELT AIDS HANDICRAFT FACTORY

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

ALBANY, N. Y.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the Governor of New York, has just concluded an exhibition of handicraft reproductions of seventeenth century furniture, produced at the Val-Kil factory at Hyde Park, in which she has an interest.

The exhibit was arranged at the Albany Institute of History and Art. Mrs. Roosevelt said the furniture was intended to preserve the art of the early American pioneers.

She announced that hand looms are being installed in factories adjacent to Hyde Park, which will provide occupation for women and girls in rural sections, and serve to check their removal to the cities.

CHILEANS JOIN ARGENTINIANS IN TRADING TREATY

Merchants of Two Nations Agree to Arbitrate All Commercial Disputes

By United Press

SANTIAGO Chile — Chilean and Argentine business men are forming an international chamber of commercial arbitration which will undertake to settle commercial disputes between citizens, firms or enterprises of one country and those of another in an impartial, rapid and economic manner. The Chilean Foreign Office is assisting the new organization in every way possible.

Chambers have been organized in Santiago and Buenos Aires, being formed by merchants or commercial firms of Argentina and Chile, without distinction as to nationality, and which have trade relations with the other country.

Members are required to abide by the decision of a quorum of the chamber to which they belong. In case a refractory member refuses to conform to the arbitral award, the chamber must bear the expense of legally prosecuting him.

Each chamber is to be composed of at least 20 members, each member paying a certain fee. A council of five, elected by the members, for a period of two years, is to have active charge. In the case of the Santiago and Buenos Aires chambers, two members of the council at Buenos Aires were named by the International Chamber at Santiago, and two members of the Chilean council were named by the Argentine chamber.

Members of either chamber are obliged to insert a clause in contracts with firms in other countries that are also members of an arbitration chamber, the following clause.

"All questions that may occasion controversies regarding this document must be submitted to arbitration along the lines indicated by the Regulations of the International Chamber of Commercial Arbitration of —— (name of city)."

In the case of Chilean firms, decisions of the Arbitration Chamber against a refractory member are sweeping in effect. If the member refuses to abide by the decision, the chamber may present an "explanatory memorandum" to the local Chilean Consul or commercial agent for transmission to the Department of Commerce of the Ministry of Foreign Relations at Santiago. The Department of Commerce, under the law for control of exportation, may order condemned property belonging to the merchant to the value of the arbitral decision made against him.

FRENCH ARE CORDIAL TO AMBASSADOR EDGE

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

PARIS—Walter E. Edge, the new American Ambassador to France, has arrived here to take his post. Both the official and public welcome were cordial.

His public comments before leaving the United States have led the French to expect that the Ambassador will give special attention not only to maintaining harmonious diplomatic relations but also to strengthening the commercial ties of the two countries. Ambassador Edge will probably be the first to use the handsome embassy which is being built according to plans approved by Ambassador Herrick.

Ten Countries Are Represented at Glass and Rug Exhibition

Best Achievements in Modern Style From Abroad and From the United States Are Shown in Extensive Art Display

The collection of modern glass and rugs which the American Federation of Arts and its Associates in Industry assembled for exhibit at the Metropolitan Museum in New York will be placed on view Dec. 17, at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts to remain through Jan. 15.

Ten countries are represented in the exhibition; six by both rugs and glass, three by rugs, and one by glass only. This is the second such exhibition to be sponsored by the American Federation of Arts in its effort to bring before the American public, manufacturers, merchants and designers, the best foreign achievements in a particular field, shown side by side with similar objects produced in the United States, with a view to stimulating American makers to the divergent expressions of the overseas designers and craftsmen.

Experimental work in glass along "modern lines" has gone forward for more than a half century. Every effort has been made to bring out the "new" qualities in glass and in recent years it has been utilized for ornamental purposes hitherto largely untouched.

The use of carved glass, for instance, for the making of a motor mascot is, to say the least, a departure from the traditional use of silvery medals and one, to judge from an example in the exhibit, not hazardous.

Tableware of glass, French, Italian, German, Swedish, English and Austrian, is included. Glass screens and glass used as an architectural detail are to be seen. The glass in the exhibition consists, for the most part, of unique pieces. But the degree to which such pieces may influence the field of glass handling is a significant defense of the manner.

Less defined are the styles and technique of the rugs shown. The two most energetic centers of rug production in the modern feeling are, according to a note by Prof. Charles R. Richards which is included in the catalogue, France and Germany. French rugs are, for the most part, made in small centers, and are hand knotted and expensive. German rugs incline to machine manufacture, although there is hand weaving on a quantity basis in competition. There are few German show or de luxe pieces. Rugs from Sweden are directly related to textile traditions, but there are several which show a fine grasp of the modern rug problem and an unusual promise of its solution. Modern English rugs are mostly the work, not of manufacturers, but the professional zeal of certain English designers whose faith in the modern movement has led them to the point of assuming all financial risks of manufacture.

Therefore, though the results of these ventures produce little unity, they are a series of sincere and vigorous experiments.

LAKIN'S LETTER REVEALS PLANS OF SUGAR LOBBY

Attorney's Friendship With President Is Cited as 'Strong Weapon'

WASHINGTON (AP)—A letter from H. C. Lakin of the Cuba Company to President Machado of Cuba, which said President Hoover had instructed Edwin P. Shattuck, attorney, and Reed Smoot, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, "to confer together," was read into the record at the Senate Lobby Committee hearing.

Mr. Shattuck, a New York attorney, was employed by Mr. Lakin to work for lower tariff rates, and the Cuba Company official had previously testified that Mr. Shattuck was employed partly because of his friendship for the President.

The letter to Machado said that Mr. Shattuck's connection with President Hoover "is our strongest weapon except your efforts and those of your ambassador."

Mr. Shattuck has denied that he has attempted to influence President Hoover in connection with the tariff bill.

The letter Mr. Lakin wrote Machado said the Cuba Company president had "obeyed your instructions to work in co-operation with your ambassador."

Calls Impression Unfair

Referring to reports of testimony, Mr. Shattuck said the impression apparently was "that I was retained because of possible influence I might have with the President."

"Such an impression is untruthful and unfair, both to the President and myself," he said.

"I have always been proud of a friendship which arose from a common service in the war," he said, "and neither I nor any other friend of the President would attempt to use such a friendship in the manner suggested. Every one who knows the President knows also that it would defeat its own purpose.

"About a year ago my firm was retained to represent the Cuban sugar interests of American citizens before the committees of Congress in respect to the tariff, and I have written briefs and presented their views to the committees as their attorney. Some time after I had presented my brief to the Ways and Means Committee, I was asked by my clients to continue my retainer.

"Before the new Administration come in I informed Mr. Hoover of my connections, not to obtain his approval of an important legal engagement, but to inform him what my connection was so that there would be no misunderstanding. The President did not feel that he had any right to ask me to abandon my clients and that matter ended. I have never sought anything from the President."

Reminded of Penalty

Previously Mr. Lakin had been reminded by Senator Walsh of Montana that the Logan act provides a $5000 fine and a three-year prison term for any American citizen who carries on correspondence with a foreign government to "defeat the measures of the Government of the United States." After Mr. Walsh had read the act, Mr. Larkin said:

"I never heard of it."

A letter from the Cuban Secretary, Rafael Sanchez Aballi, in reply to Mr. Lakin's proposal to work for lower sugar tariffs was read, which said the suggestion was "excellent."

"I think he was kind of letting me down easy," Lakin said. "That's the impression I had."

Mr. Lakin had previously testified he was "ashamed" of the proposal and that Aballi had "rebuked" him.

"Was it a patriotic thing to incite Latin-American countries against this country," Senator Walsh asked.

"I can't say anything more than that I am very much ashamed of it," Mr. Lakin said.

Another letter said Shattuck had been "summoned" by President-elect Hoover at Miami before the inauguration, but Mr. Lakin interposed that he had been mistaken about Shattuck's being summoned.

Mr. Lakin wrote to Col. J. M. Tarafa of Cuba on Feb. 23 that he had raised a fund of over $85,000 to conduct the fight.

PRISON REFORM URGED AS GUARD AGAINST CRIME

to be deferred. If the program of protective penology outlined is to be carried out, if men are to be made better, and therefore less dangerous, it cannot be done by herding, overcrowding, by idleness or by government neglect."

Baumes Expects Success for New York Prison Bills

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

ALBANY, N. Y.—No opposition to legislative appropriation bills for prison rehabilitation work and for the construction of new prisons is expected by Caleb H. Baumes (R.), of Newburgh, chairman of the Baumes Crime Commission, in view of the further evidence of the need of such legislation in the recent outbreak at Auburn prison.

Declaring that the commission has forecast for three years, from the crowded conditions, the outbreaks in the prison, Mr. Baumes said the solution of the problem would be accomplished, "when we get a cell for every prisoner, and not until then."

"We need more prisons, we need to get at it as soon as we can, and we need to start right away on another prison," Mr. Baumes said. "The whole problem will be solved when we get a cell for every prisoner, and not until then. We will push our bills this winter at the capital and I do not anticipate any great opposition in view of all that has happened.

"It has taken just such happenings as these prison outbreaks to bring to the notice of the Legislature the need of attention to the prison system. For three years we have told them that to keep prisoners two, three and four in a cell was not only a temptation but an invitation to riot."

Mr. Baumes said that while it was a foregone conclusion with him that overcrowding, idleness, lack of guards and old and insanitary cells would cause trouble, there was now a mystery to add to these, in the facts attending the Auburn rising. "The mystery," he continued, "is where those Mutual Welfare League fellows got the steel handcuffs with which they shackled the guards and the warden."

Master Farmers of New York Named

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—Fourteen farmers, representing 13 counties in New York, chosen for outstanding success in farming, community leadership and home-making, received the Master Farmer award of a gold medal at a dinner just held here under the auspices of the American Agriculturist. The presentations were made by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The principal considerations in making the awards are the farmer's financial success with reference to the size of his farm investment and his field of opportunity, his standing as a leader in his farming community, and the record of his achievement in the education of his children and the upbuilding of a farm home.

The recipients of the award were Wesley J. Young of Cherry Creek, Chautauqua County; Arthur Boice of Germantown, Columbia County; Henry G. Marquard of Orchard Park, Erie County; John Child of Malone, Franklin County; W. D. Robins of Poland, Herkimer County; H. D. Forward of Camillus, Onondaga County; J. L. Salisbury of Phelps, Ontario County; Thomas R. Fife of Madrid, St. Lawrence County; Morgan S. Myers of Barnerville, Schoharie County; W. H. Morris of Alpine, Schuyler County; Minor C. Brokaw of Interlaken, Seneca County; Herbert P. King of Trumansburg, Seneca County; Carl A. Mott of Dryden, Thompkins County, and Jesse Gibson of South Hartford, Washington County.

The board of judges included Governor Roosevelt, Mr. Morgenthau, E. R. Eastman, editor of the American Agriculturist; Berne A. Pyrke, Commissioner of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, and others closely connected with the agricultural activities of the State.

Roosevelt Renews Power Control Plea

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—State development of water-power resources was urged by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt in an address before the Politics Club of the College of the City of New York, with an emphasis that leaves little doubt in the belief of political observers here that he will make the question the chief issue when he seeks re-election next year. The people of the State are "paying through the nose for gas and electricity," the Governor declared.

"Some of us," the Governor said, "have been called socialistic for believing that the State could operate such utilities better than private management. But we already have such Socialism in the United States in our mail system, our water supply and other similar governmental ventures."

It has been the Governor's inclination to seek effective compromises with public utility interests in the State, but his comment on the rates being paid by consumers over the State is held to indicate definitely that, in seeking re-election, he will contend for state hydro-electric control as an argument for equitable rates.

CHURCH DRAMA GROUP DROPS WILL H. HAYS

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—Because it "deemed it wise not to have representatives of the motion picture industry on its board," officials of the Church and Drama Association announced that Will H. Hays and Carl E. Milliken are no longer members of its board of directors. Mr. Hays is president and Mr. Milliken is secretary of Motion Picture Producers & Distributors, Inc., of America.

The Church and Drama Association was started in 1926 by the Federal Council of Churches and recently took into its membership, by affiliation, the Drama League of America and the America Theater Association.

CRIMINAL RATIO IN FOREIGN-BORN TO BE ANALYZED

Hoover Law Inquiry Board to Settle How Large Part They Are in Problem

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Research workers assisting the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement will try to ascertain whether an undue proportion of crime in the United States is committed by foreign-born residents or their children in the first generation.

Miss Edith Abbott, dean of the graduate school of social service administration at the University of Chicago, has assumed general charge of this inquiry. In New Orleans, one of three or four cities chosen for the survey, graduate students in the school of social work, Tulane University, will make the investigation under the direction of Prof. Jesse F. Steiner.

The outline for the investigation here was worked out by Professor Steiner in co-operation with Monte M.. Lemann of New Orleans, a member of the national commission.

"After looking over the situation here," Professor Steiner said, "I am confident that we can carry on a study of real significance that will indicate the extent to which foreign groups in a southern city are contributing to the problems of criminality. According to the census of 1920, 6.7 per cent of the population in New Orleans are foreign-born and 17.8 per cent are second generation immigrants. This makes a total immigrant population of 85,275, or 24.6 per cent of the population of the city. This is only slightly less than our Negro population and is exactly half the native whites of native parentage."

The investigation will include: a comparative study of the number of arrests of foreign and native born, by nationality and race, in the last 10 years, the arrests being classified according to the crimes charged; homicides in the last 5 or 10 years; convictions in the criminal courts; juvenile delinquency cases in 1928; arrests, convictions and juvenile delinquency for a three-month period.

The last item would be obtained from special records to be secured through the co-operation of police and court authorities. "This would be of value not merely because of the facts revealed," said Professor Steiner, "but also as a check on our study of existing records."

IMPORTANT JOB GIVEN ANOTHER WOMAN FLIER

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—Following quickly on the announcement of Mrs. Keith Miller's appointment as chief test pilot for the Victor Aircraft Company—the first time a woman has been named to that position in this country—the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service has announced the appointment of Miss Margaret Thomas as one of its demonstration pilots.

Miss Thomas, who is a native of San Antonio, Tex., was said to be "probably the youngest woman commercial flier in the United States." Although she has enough flying time to be a transport pilot, she will not be able to qualify for that license until next March, on the occasion of her eighteenth birthday.

NEW YORK BAR URGES WORLD COURT SUPPORT

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—The United States' adherence to the World Court has just been approved as an "essential step to the organization of peace, and a step desirable in itself," in a resolution adopted by the New York Bar Association. The resolution was embodied in a report prepared by the Committee on International Law, for which Elihu Root is chairman and George W. Wickersham, vice-chairman. This report will be sent to President Hoover and to the members of the Senate.

The report declared that "The draft protocol protects, in all respects, the interests of the United States and therefore, the protocol should be signed promptly and ratified by the United States Senate without further amendment."

Signal Honor Given to Calvin Coolidge

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—Calvin Coolidge, thirtieth President of the United States, was made an honorary member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society at exercises here dedicating the society's new $300,000 colonial building in East Fifty-Eighth Street. The honor was conferred upon Mr. Coolidge by Charles E. Hughes, who characterized the former President as one who "typified the American character and dignified the American name."

Election of 24 corresponding members and 22 Fellows took place, the latter being chosen "in recognition of notable service, not consisting of monetary contributions, toward the advancement of genealogy, history and biography in general, and especially in connection with the interest fostered with this society."

The list of Fellows is as follows: James Rowland Angell, president Yale University; George Fisher Baker; Nicholas Murray Butler, president Columbia University; Prof. Edward Channing, Harvard University; Livingston Farrand, president Cornell University; Max Farrand of the Huntington Library, California; Worthington Chauncey Ford; Cass Gilbert, president National Academy of Design; Edward Stephen Harkness; Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart, Harvard University; John Grier Hibben, president Princeton University; J. Franklin Jameson; John Markel, John Pierpont Morgan, Arthur Stanley Pease, president Amherst College; Josiah Harmar Penniman, provost University of Pennsylvania; John Davison Rockefeller Jr.; Lyon Gardiner Tyler, former president William and Mary College; Felix M. Warburg.

William Ross Proctor, first vice-president of the society, formally turned over the building to the board of trustees, for whom it was accepted by Clarence Winthrop Bowen. Mr. Coolidge was the guest of honor at a dinner at the Metropolitan Club.

NEW LINE TO BE BUILT

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Union Pacific system has been ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission to undertake the construction of 181 miles of new line between Crane and Crescent Lake, both points in Oregon, at an expense of approximately $9,000,000.

Australian Business Girl's State Greatly Improved in Last Five Years

Special Gymnasia and Social Halls Provided for Her Use and Prominent Citizens Speak at Her Weekly Luncheons

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—During the last five years there has been a great change for the better in the circumstances of Australian business girls.

Girls of this city who labor in offices, banks, stores and factories have something to look forward to. There are special means of recreation and exercise. The section known as "business girls," who work in stores, banks and offices, have their own gymnasia and social halls, and engage in outside games permitted by the genial climate all the year round.

The Government of New South Wales is co-operating with them in providing a Sydney sports ground that will be their own. All the great stores and manufacturers are ready to assist any move that makes for greater contentment. A club of business girls known by the Australian aboriginal name "Kooroora" is drawing not only upon those associated with business, but on leaders of thought in various avenues of activity. The "Kooroora" is a lunching club. The business girls arrange for a lunch once a week at a cost of about 1s. 6d. per person, and at this luncheon a prominent citizen talks to them on something that entertains as well as interests, and prompts thought along useful channels.

One of the earliest speakers was Sir Henry Braddon, first to undertake the duties of Australian High Commissioner to the United States, and who is prominent in connection with the English-Speaking Union. All are available to the lunching girls, even the Prime Minister. A respectful request will command the attendance of anyone worth while, and insure the delivery of something worth listening to. The talks conclude in time to permit the girls to reassemble at the hives of industry ere the clock strikes two.

MARSHALS RENOMINATED

Book Committee

AS A SERVICE to CUSTOMERS of its BOOK DEPARTMENT, the HARVARD CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY plans to issue at intervals throughout the college year lists of recent books of non-fiction likely to be of interest to those who buy through the Society. The selections of titles for these lists will be made by a committee of Harvard graduates, consisting of Assistant Professors Kenneth B. Murdock '16, Robert S. Hillyer '17, and Edward A. Whitney '17. The committee will not attempt to pick out "best sellers" or the "best books of the month," but will try to indicate some recent works which for one reason or another are likely to prove worth reading for customers of the Society. In the annual flood of new publications it is the hope of the Society to bring a few such works to the notice of customers by presenting periodically the titles chosen by Professors Murdock, Hillyer and Whitney.

BARNES NAMES 20 TO WORK ON EXPANSION PLAN

Leaders of Nation's Business Will Meet to Cope With Unemployment

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

WASHINGTON—Immediate action is contemplated by eastern members of the executive committee named by the national business survey conference to cope with unemployment. Julius H. Barnes, head of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and chairman of the recent survey conference, left immediately for New York after announcing the personnel of the new committee which he has named. He will get in touch with the eight members of the committee living in New York and there lay the plans for prompt action.

Announcement of the names of 20 nationally known business leaders to serve in the executive committee marked the last step in the mobilization of private industry to work with President Hoover in the stabilization of prosperity. The membership of the group is scattered all over the United States and is representative of varied fields. Mr. Barnes is serving as chairman, and with him are the following:

Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company and of the Radio Corporation of America, New York; Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation, New York City; Thomas W. Lamont, partner in the J. P. Morgan house, New York City; Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific Company, San Francisco, Calif.; Clarence M. Woolley, chairman of the board of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation, New York City; Henry M. Robinson, president of the Los Angeles First National Trust and Savings Bank, Los Angeles, Calif.; Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, New York City; James Simpson, president of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, Ill.; Cornelius F. Kelley, president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, New York City; Elbert L. Carpenter, president of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, Minneapolis, Minn.; Pierre S. du Pont, chairman of the board of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Wilmington, Del.; Lewis E. Pierson, chairman of the board of the Irving Trust Company, New York City; George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, Philadelphia, Pa.; Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, New York City; Alvan MacAuley, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, Detroit, Mich.; John G. Lonsdale, president of the American Bankers Association, St. Louis, Mo.; Stuart W. Cramer, director, Cotton Textile Institute, Cramerton, N. C.; Charles Cheney, president of the National Industrial Conference Board, Manchester, Conn.; Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the board of Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago; Harry Chandler, publisher Los Angeles Times, Los Angeles, Calif.

Eight of the group live in New York, and, with Mr. Barnes and three others also living in adjacent territory, more than the necessary majority can be brought together to carry on business. In a statement Mr. Barnes explained that a larger liaison committee of about 50 to link the executive group up to the respective industrial divisions will be named in the future. The situation warrants confidence in the early stabilization of business, Mr. Barnes said, but "without justifying excessive optimism before the close of the test period of the next few months."

At the same time Robert P. Lamont, Secretary of Commerce, announced details of the formation of the new Division of Public Construction, and stated that a preliminary survey by that body revealed "widespread, prompt and efficient mobilization of effort to expedite public construction. Daily average for new building contracts, awarded in 37 eastern states, Mr.Lamont said, was $21,722,000 for the first week of December, against only $17,026,000 for the same week a year ago.

HOOVER MISSION TO INVESTIGATE HAITI CONDITION

Results of American Intervention Since 1915 to Be Inquired Into

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

WASHINGTON — The proposed Hoover mission to Haiti will investigate not only the recent outbreak which latest dispatches indicate is nearly over, but all the circumstances back of American intervention in the small Negro republic.

Eight hundred miles southeast of Florida in the tropical green gulf is placed one of the most beautiful islands in the world, a little smaller than Ireland, and the site of two tiny nations. One of these is Santo Domingo, and the other and smaller one, occupying about one-third of the island, Haiti. Behind the palm-fringed shore rises a crumpled mass of mountains, in some cases reaching 8000 to 10,000 feet, covered with dark jungle. In the towns along the shore and in settlements back in the mountains a barefoot citizenry lives an unhurried, casual life, with an extraordinary intermixture of language, customs and beliefs drawn from Europe and Africa.

On the shore may still be seen the ruined homes of the French immigrants of the sixteenth century who ruthlessly completed the Spaniards' work of subjugating the native Indians of "Hispaniola," and who imported the slaves from Africa who made the colony one of the wealthiest in the New World. Today the Latin masters are gone, and the former slaves compose the populace.

But after 100 years of independence, the first Negro colony in the world that ever successfully revolted and maintained itself as a government, is once again, more or less under the supervision of outsiders. At present it is under the guidance of Brig.-Gen. John H. Russell, the American High Commissioner. It can only be said that in its 100 years of independence it crowded more detailed and tempestuous history than many of its less vivid neighbors achieved in three centuries. Between 1804 and 1915 it has had 24 chiefs of state, including two Emperors, and only two of the 24 retired peacefully. Generally the President's term ended with a revolution.

The American State Department estimates that approximately 90 per cent of the black populace of perhaps 2,500,000 is illiterate. Since 1915, when American intervention occurred as a result of the World War, education has been pushed, as well as a program of road building, public works, sanitation and financial reforms. However, it is forecast that the proposed Hoover mission of inquiry will find the need for radical changes in some directions in American administration, while on the larger question of Haiti's future alterations in policy may be advised.

There are really two Haitis, students of the country declare, affording a vivid contrast. One is composed of the vast majority of the black masses, African, illiterate, uncouth, yet manly and self-respecting; and the other, made up of the small minority, are often well-educated, refined and European in outlook. These two groups differ even to language and religion, for the mass speak a form of creole patois, in which the original French has been Africanized, simplified, corrupted and elided almost out of recognition.

It possesses, too, according to observers, much of the superstition of the ancestral jungle belief over which Christianity has been veneered. The music of the masses is generally the thumping of a drum; the beast of burden the burro, worth $5 or $10, and the national foodstuffs rice and red beans. The people are not subservient, but manly in their bearing, and mindful of the tradition of independence which, for example, caused Henry Christophe, born a slave, to uphold the colored rule in the face of French aggression.

Christophe reared a fortress larger than the Tower of London on a mountain peak 3000 feet above the sea, whose ruins are still visible, while the island also shows the remains of the palace built for Pauline Bonaparte, when Napoleon sent his brother-in-law with an army to do battle with the slaves who had won their freedom.

It is the belief of the Hoover Administration that the time has come to assess the achievements of the American occupation, which theoretically ends in 1936. Between 1922 and 1929 it is generally agreed that huge material advantages have followed intervention. These have taken five directions: order and security has been maintained; roads and public works have been constructed; sanitation has been extended; a system of manual training and agricultural study established, and the island financially rehabilitated.

Despite these undoubted achievements it is an open question whether the islanders sympathize with the American régime. It is generally agreed that the Haitians themselves have made little improvement in their ability to maintain orderly government. The convention of 1915, under which the United States occupies Haiti, ends in 1936. The question of evacuation or negotiation of a new treaty must be settled by then. President Hoover obviously had this in view when he proposed to Congress that a new commission be dispatched "to review and study the matter in an endeavor to arrive at some more definite policy than at present."

SALESMEN'S AID SOUGHT TO BOOM PROSPERITY PLAN

Chicago Banker Says They Could Check Pessimism If Business Lags

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

CHICAGO—Convert the sales forces of the Nation into an army of prosperity, armed with the economic facts as brought out by business leaders at the Hoover conferences, and send them out over their territories to check pessimism and fear. This advice was given to industrial executives by Harry A. Wheeler, Chicago banker and former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in an address here.

"Great publicity has been given to the efforts of the President and to the pledges of corporate management," Mr. Wheeler declared. "The public has been reassured, but the need of the moment is an interpretation of what these pledges actually mean. Construction programs as slow in their development. The public must be made to know that these reassurances for large expenditures will not become effective in any considerable degree until after the first quarter of 1930.

"In the meantime, the whole situation will be tremendously helped by the normal absorption of commodities by the people at large. Those possessing a purchasing power and failing to use it will seriously retard the whole program of stabilizing business, and it is just as much an obligation upon the individual who has the means to buy to utilize that power as it is upon the corporation to proceed enthusiastically with its program of construction.

"To this end I make a suggestion. Almost uniformly the selling forces of every business are called together for conferences with the management at this time of the year. If, as a part of this general program of stabilization, every employer will see to it that his representatives in the field are thoroughly informed about the possibilities of the movement started by President Hoover and if they are enthused to carry this interpretation into their respective fields, evidencing the enthusiasm and optimism which is perfectly proper at this time, we will induce normal expenditures and normal absorption of commodities and will swing into the summer of 1930 with business reestablished upon a sound basis, relieved of the menace of an unnatural securities market and commanding a period of real and normal prosperity for many years to come."

Prussia Encourages Deep Sea Fishing

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

BERLIN—The Prussian State is doing everything in its power to encourage the development of deep sea fishing. It has shown this interest in the case of the fishing harbor of Wesermünde by taking shares to the value of 50,000,000 marks in the Fishing Harbor Company.

Among the fishing companies themselves, the attitude of the state has caused great satisfaction and a feeling of optimism prevails that is expressed in the untiring efforts of the companies to develop the German fishing fleets. In the last few months a large number of new trawlers have been launched and taken over by the Weser fishing steamer owners.

NAVY TO SUPPLY ELECTRICITY TO CITY OF TACOMA

Aircraft Carrier Lexington, Anchored Off City, to Help Out for 30 Days

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

WASHINGTON — Tacoma, Wash., has prevailed in its request that the Navy Department permit the use of the aircraft carrier, Lexington, as an emergency auxiliary power plant.

Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of Navy, had urged that the city pool the power from its municipal plant with that of a private-owned company under a joint administrator. Neither side could agree on an acceptable choice and Mr. Adams through C. C. Dill (D.), Senator from Washington, was told that his demands were not feasible and the petition for the use of the naval vessel was renewed. The city offered to pay for the current obtained from the ship.

Mr. Dill offered a resolution in the Senate which directed the Secretary to permit the use of the craft and was preparing to make a floor contest of the issue when Mr. Adams advised him of his reversal of position on the matter.

The Lexington can produce nearly 2,000,000 horsepower, sufficient to supply the needs of a city of more than 1,500,000 persons. Puget Sound officials maintain that Tacoma needs only about 40,000 horsepower to tide over a hydroelectric shortage due to an unprecedented drought.

Mr. Adams's authorization of the use of the Lexington followed within a few hours after a conference with Mr. Dill and Wesley L. Jones (R.), Senator from Washington. Under Mr. Adams's orders, the Lexington at anchorage at Seattle proceeds at once to Tacoma to hook up with the municipal power system. It will serve the city for 30 days, all power that Tacoma obtains being paid for in advance.

NEW FACILITIES HAVE MADE AIR TRAVEL SAFER

be warned in time to permit him either to turn back or to seek safety at an intermediate airport, until after the storm.

Lights Direct Course

If the plane is flying at night, the pilot will see a far-flung line of airway lights which point out the course to his destination. If he is flying in bad weather or fog, or above the clouds, there still is the radio beacon system, with a guiding finger on his instrument board to tell him whether he is flying true or whether cross winds or misjudgment in operation have carried him to the right or the left.

In addition to these aids another is soon to be ready for practical use on the airways—the fog landing beacon recently developed by the Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of aeronautics, in co-operation with the Bureau of Standards.

This recent device, developed in answer to the demand for means to enable planes to glide safely into airports shrouded in fog, is a development of the directional radio beacon. Instead, however, of charting a cross-country course, this type of beacon, throws a beam at an angle with the ground, which, when followed by an airplane coming into an airport for a landing, will bring the craft safely to rest at the airport, with aid only of new type altimeters showing accurate altitudes above ground. The device, developed with the aid of First Lieut. James H. Doolittle of the Army Air Corps who tested the various types of instruments invented, was successfully tested in public a month ago.

The New York-Cleveland leg of the transcontinental airway is probably the most highly developed of all the civil airways in the United States as it is the laboratory in which most of the aids to navigation now in use have been tried out. The system of weather reporting is now extended throughout the country and teletype communication is rapidly being improved.

Lighting System Being Extended

Forty per cent of the Nation's 25,000 miles of airways are equipped with night-lighting facilities and the system is being extended, although the recent utterances of President Hoover and Postmaster-General Brown indicate that future development of airways under Government sponsorship may be confined to the general trade routes criss-crossing the country. These same airways are dotted with intermediate emergency landing fields, the majority of which are provided with boundary lights to insure safe landings at night.

The airways weather reporting service consists of 164 stations, 27 airway radio communication stations and seven radio beacon stations. The weather reporting service follows the line of the most important airways, the leading installations being in connection with the transcontinental air mail route. The radio communication stations also follow these airways. The beacon stations are still confined to the eastern end of the transcontinental airway, however.

The development of new beacon transmitters which are capable of laying down a maximum of 12 different courses and the utilization of this equipment at present stations will greatly extend their usefulness. For instance, it will permit the radio beacon station at Chicago to lay out not only the air routes east to Cleveland and New York and west to Omaha, Rock Springs and the Pacific coast but also the north and south airways to St. Paul-Minneapolis and New Orleans and Atlanta as well as other courses at angles from these.

The utilization of aids to air navigation, after all, is only in its primary stages and it may be expected that the gradual extension of the Government system of airway aids will materially increase safety factors in air navigation. Tremendous gains have been made in the economical operation of aircraft, by permitting flights under conditions which would once have been considered dangerous to any but the most hardened and courageous air mail pilots.

WOOLEN MILLS REOPENED

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—The Leaksville Woolen Mills, situated six miles west of here, has reopened after being closed for several weeks following a strike called by the National Textile Workers' Union. Mill officials said a full complement of workers reported. There was no picketing by union members.

TRADE RIVALRY FOUND BACK OF ALL ARMAMENT

Willingness to Reduce Said to Show Easing of National Aggressiveness

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

RIVERSIDE, Calif.—"Willingness to reduce armament is more significant than the actual reduction itself, because it indicates a recession of that nationalistic aggressiveness which is the fundamental cause of conflict."

This statement was made by Henry F. Grady, dean of the college of commerce, University of California, to the Institute of International Relations here.

"Armament," he said, "is a result, rather than a cause, of those nationalistic rivalries which are fundamentally economic. War is national aggressiveness that has slipped over into the field of chemistry and explosives. The difference between a foreign trade 'offensive,' and a military campaign is really only a difference in method and instruments."

Dr. Grady deprecated national policies which erect tariff barriers to keep foreign goods out and at the same time attempt to maximize sales of domestic goods abroad. Such methods he characterized as "unarmed commercial and financial warfare," which are sure to bring actual warfare in time, and should logically be supported by great armament.

In asking the removal of trade barriers as a concomitant to reductions in armament, Dr. Grady pointed out that "every widening of the sphere in which commerce can flow freely, has resulted in intensifying the prosperity of that sphere, as in the American domestic market, where interstate tariffs are unknown."

The coming five-power naval conference in London, he said, promised to do much toward bringing about moral disarmament, "which," he said, "will have tangible expression in a move for greater world co-operation in trade and commerce, not only because of the direct benefits from this, but because it is only in this way that we can find a solvent for that nationalistic selfishness which has been the cause of all modern wars."

How school children in Los Angeles are being instructed in world peace was explained to the institute by Miss Evaline Dowling, chairman of a world friendship committee of the public schools of that city. Miss Dowling outlined a program of peace instruction which runs from the outlawing of toy guns, swords and knives in kindergarten rooms up to the comprehensive teaching of world friendship in the higher grades.

Milton A. McRae, publisher and journalist, discussed public opinion and international relations. Newspapers are not the only moulders of public opinion, he said, being as often merely reflectors of that opinion. The church, school and such organizations as the Boy Scouts are all factors in forming public opinions, he declared, and all should be exercised in the interests of world peace.

Stephen V. Graham, retired United States Navy captain, told the delegates that American naval men are not opposed to a cessation of competitive building of navies by general agreement. They stand with President Hoover, he said, in supporting this ideal while at the same time maintaining adequate defenses.

GRUNDY SEATED IN VARE'S PLACE IN UPPER HOUSE

them as literal corroboration of everything they charge against the Republican Party.

And it was most noticeable that there was complete and total absence of elation on the part of Republican leaders when Mr. Grundy had been formally installed in his place. In fact, not a Republican had risen throughout the three-hour debate to argue the issue of Mr. Grundy's right to incumbency. It was among the Democrats and the Insurgents that the subject was threshed out.

A unique welcome to the Senate was accorded to Mr. Grundy. For three hours he sat while speaker after speaker condemned his appointment and assailed his political and lobbying activities. And his severest critics were the very men who insisted that the Senate had no other alternative but to allow him the place he claimed.

Claude A. Swanson (D.), Senator from Virginia; Joseph T. Robinson (D.), Senator from Arkansas; Walter George (D.), Senator from Georgia; Coleman T. Blease (D.), Senator from South Carolina, upheld the validity of his appointment while in ringing tones they denounced his selection and the Governor of Pennsylvania for making it.

Nye Leads Opposition

The three-hour debate that the opposition precipitated over Mr. Grundy's seating marked with complete success its plans to make as much capital as possible over his appearance in the chamber. Gerald P. Nye (R.), Senator from North Dakota, who led the movement against the Pennsylvanian with a resolution excluding him, conceded in his opening remarks that he had no hope of succeeding, but he wanted the "record" made.

From that forceful maneuver and the unanticipated support that it rallied from Bronson Cutting (R.), Senator from New Mexico, in an unusually effective speech, the whole contest developed. What had been expected to be a short flurry developed into a major debate, with crowded galleries and full attendance in the Senate Chamber.

Mr. Nye and Mr. Cutting laid down the basis of the opposition contention. They held that as the Senate had rejected Mr. Vare on the ground that the election was fraudulent and corrupt, and had also declared that his Democratic opponent, William B. Wilson had not been elected, that therefore there had not been an election and that John S. Fisher had also not lawfully been elected Governor and therefore could not appoint to fill a vacancy.

Bloc Divided on Policy

Democrats and Progressives split on the issue: Has the Senate the right to go behind an applicant's credentials? It is an old, old controversy and the Senate has voted on both sides of the question. In fact it did so in the case of Mr. Vare and Mr. Grundy. The debate in this instance saw George W. Norris (R.), Senator from Nebraska, who led the contest against Mr. Vare while arraigning Mr. Grundy's appointment, maintain that he was legally entitled to his place.

Throughout it all Mr. Grundy was his own comfort. He sat imperturbable and silent; often smiling goodnaturedly at sallies at his expense. Not a single Republican, not even Mr. Reed, who so long and so earnestly had defended Mr. Vare, rose to say a word in mitigation.

And then when it was all over and on a motion of Hiram Johnson (R.), Senator from California, the parliamentary tangle was solved, and the oath was administered to Mr. Grundy while the resolutions against him were sent to the Privileges and Elections Committee to be voted on some future date, and the new junior Senator from Pennsylvania met the crowding newspaper men in near-by Mr. Reed's office, where talkie-news reel photographers had set up great lamps and cameras for a "shot" of him, he was still calm and pleasantly agreeable.

Politically Mr. Grundy perhaps faces a turbulent Senatorial career; personally and socially, it is easy to prognosticate for him a very considerable success in the capital.

Argentina's Foreign Trade Proves Active

BUENOS AIRES (By U. P.)—Argentina had a favorable trade balance for the first nine months of this year of 110,757,993 gold pesos (a gold peso is worth approximately $1.06), according to a report of the statistical department, issued by the Finance Ministry.

Foreign trade for the period totaled 1,438,970,113 gold pesos, of which 774,864,053 pesos were exports and 664,106,060 pesos were imports. However, the total foreign trade for the period shows a decrease of 2,768,155 gold pesos, as compared to the same period last year.

Imports, with the exception of tobacco and textiles, showed increases especially in machinery and vehicles, which jumped from 81,697,536 to 108,289,885 gold pesos, or an increase of 32.5 per cent. Rubber goods importations increased from 16,729,111 to 22,613,159, or 32.5 per cent. Exports of cereals and linseed increased in volume from 11,397,383 tons to 11,776,546 tons, but because of the fall in prices the value decreased 2.6 per cent.

FEDERAL FARM AID SOUGHT IN NEW DIRECTIONS

$100,000,000 Wanted for Rural Schools—Better Roads, Cheap Fertilizer Urged

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

CHICAGO — Increasing reliance upon the Federal Government to do for the farmer what he seems unable to do for himself was manifested at this year's symposium on farm trends embodied in the annual convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Three new fields for the Federal Government to enter with help for the farmer are now proposed. One marks a sharp break with tradition. This is the project of advancing federal aid to country schools. It apparently embraces the idea of nationalizing rural education.

According to reports brought to the farm bureau convention, some rural schools are not getting enough money to carry them along. State aid has not tided them over. Indeed one speaker reported that in Indiana the requirements placed upon rural schools by the State had added to their financial problems. He said that a number of rural schools in poorer sections of Indiana were considering closing up in mid-winter.

Leaving rural education to the states has not worked out, as the farm bureau president put it. The quality of education differs with the various states, he said. The farm boy and girl in a section where rural educational advantages are deficient does not have the same opportunity as youngsters who happen to live where more money is available for education. Equalization of opportunity is sought. The farm bureau decided to try for it by seeking recourse to the Federal Government.

A bill is in preparation, it is reported, carrying an appropriation of $100,000,000 or more to start federal aid to country schools. Farm bureau indorsement of the plan did not carry with it approval of the proposed federal department of education. This was not mentioned.

Likewise with local roads. Some 5,000,000 farms, it was said, are on dirt roads which are frequently impassable in winter. The farmers agreed that the improvement of secondary roads linking the farmer with main arteries to markets was something neither the State nor local taxing units should be responsible for. In many cases "such farm to market" highways could never be built out of local funds. For help the farmers again turned to Washington, asking an initial appropriation of at least $125,000,000 from the present Congress.

Both roads and rural schools are largely matters of taxation. The tax resolutions of the federation placed it on record as asking that the "various states and the Federal Government, for the purpose of equalizing economic opportunities, assume in greater measure the support of the public schools and public roads."

Government loans to help farmers in buying co-operatively for the purposes of farm operation is a new field proposed for federal assistance. Extension service work, for which additional funds are asked, is an old one.

Government help to the farmer in keeping down the price of his fertilizer through Muscle Shoals is a long discussed topic. The Farm Bureau sought Muscle Shoals operation on a "vast commercial scale at the earliest possible moment." They saw its output breaking down prices on nitrate fixed by a world combination. On this topic they support President Hoover's recommendation of a private lease for agricultural purposes.

STEVENS TECH PLANS CAMP FOR ENGINEERS

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

NEW YORK—Plans for the establishment by Stevens Institute of Technology of a summer camp for the study of civil engineering in Warren County, N. J., were disclosed by the Board of Trustees of the institute, who announced the purchase of 340 acres of woodland and rolling country north of the Jenny Jump Mountains, between Blairstown and Johnsonburg.

The construction of camp buildings, Dr. Harvey N. Davis, president, said, will proceed during the winter and spring and the entire freshman class will be sent there at the end of the college year for six weeks of practical instruction in railroad and highway layouts and other problems in civil engineering.

Curacao Affair Arouses Criticism

BY RADIO TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

AMSTERDAM—The Second Chamber, discussing the budget for the Dutch island of Curacao, severely criticized the events during the Venezuelan-Willemstad attack, which was considered the result of lack of guidance by the governor of the island.

It was argued that the Netherlands ought to take measures in order to exclude the possibility of Curacao being used as a basis for attempts to create riots in the neighboring friendly nations. Mr. D. Degraaff, Minister of the Colonies said that military forces were sufficient and lack of guidance was the only reason why the attack of the rebels was not repulsed. Nevertheless the opinion was held that the existing police force should be enlarged and the presence of a cruiser in Curacao was seen to be necessary. He declared that no apprehension of the repetition of this experience need now exist.

OIL CORPORATION SELLS CARTAGENA BAY RIGHTS

BOGOTA, Colombia (By U. P.)—The Andian National Corporation has sold its properties in the bay at Cartagena to the Government for $350,000, it is announced.

The sale returns to the Government the La Machina wharf, which was purchased by the Andian Corporation about five years ago, when it constructed a long oil pipe line from Barranca Bermeja to Cartagena. Details of the sale, are now being studied by the Cabinet ministers.

NORWAY PLANS BIG EXPOSITION AT TRONDHJEM

National Fair to Open Early in 1930—Proposal to Rename City

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

TRONDHJEM, Norway — Preparations for the great exposition to open at Trondhjem, Norway, about May 17 are actively under way.

The site of the exposition will be on the island of Nidarö, which is encircled by the River Nid. The fair, known as the Tröndelag Exhibition, will present Norway's latest achievements in farm, forest and industry, displaying dairy products, farming implements, handicrafts and domestic arts.

The historical exposition will be in three parts; the first showing the extent that the Olav cult has spread in other lands, the second being of an ecclesiastical-cultural nature, including the oldest historical records of Trondhjem and the Tröndelag, the third being the State Historical Exhibition, which will be shown in the large memorial hall of the Archbishop's residence. There will be a large collection of medieval sculpture which has been hidden away in a cellar and which will be accessible to the public for the first time.

Fisheries Exhibition

The Fisheries Exhibition, including a main hall, a machinery hall, private pavilions and docks for the boats on exposition, will be on a site in the harbor in direct communication with Nidarö, visible to travelers approaching the exposition by boat. Fish and fish products are Norway's second export, and Trondhjem was the first city in Norway to begin the export of fresh fish, a business which has increased tenfold in the last 10 years. The fisheries of Norway show ample evidence of entering upon a period of renewal and expansion.

Besides many congresses to be held in Trondhjem during the exposition, there will be concerts by the Norwegian Choral Union, historical pageants, sports and dramatic performances.

Incidentally, all Norway has for months been very much exercised over the proposal to change the name of Trondhjem to its very ancient name Nidaros, the ancient capital of Norway.

On July 29, 1930, it will have been 900 years since the great Norwegian king and national saint, Olav Haraldson, fell at Stiklestad, near Trondhjem. Olov, or St. Olav, as he is now called, is always alluded to as Norway's "eternal king," or "Rex Perpetuus Norvegiæ."

Dispute Over Name

At Stiklestad the interior of the ancient church built over the spot where Olav fell has been restored and is soon to be dedicated. At Trondhjem the western nave of the cathedral has been reconstructed and will be dedicated on July 29. An interesting feature of these events will be the old church music which has been revived for the occasion and will be used side by side with the new compositions.

When the municipal government at Trondhjem definitely rejected the proposal of changing the city's name to Nidaros, the people who urged the change were not satisfied, and a new proposal was entered into this year's session of the town council to change the name to Nidaros in time for the exposition. A petition from those elements who were instrumental in the rejection of the motion again sought to prevent this proposition or motion being entered in this year's city council on the ground that such action has no precedent. This petition, however, was not accepted, and the new motion to change the name will be discussed in regular order, although such action in the same year's council is most exceptional.

Slavs of All Nations at Parley in Prague

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Leading philologists from all the Slav countries, as well as Slav scholars from the United States, England, Germany, and other nations, recently met here for the first Pan-Slav Philologists' Congress. It was most fitting that the Czechoslovak capital should have been chosen as the meeting-place, if only as a mark of recognition of all that it has meant for Slav culture during the past century and a half.

The congress dealt with Slav literary history, Slav linguistic problems and Slav pedagogic and didactic problems. Owing to different developments during the centuries, the ideal of a comparative study of literary history and language of all Slavdom was found far from realizable at present. The contrast in cultural development between the Czechs and the Serbs, the Croats and the Poles, for example, is based on a different history, upon contacts with different types of civilization during the past. Some of the Slavs, such as the Czechs, have adopted exclusively Latin characters in writing and printing, but the Russians and the Serbs still use the Cyrillic alphabet.

The Bulgars, though racially not Slav, long ago adopted a Slav tongue and made it their own.

The work done at this first congress amounted mainly to a statement of the difficulties, and the establishment of a basis for discussion, which shall also prove to be a starting-point for profitable co-operative work among Slav scholars everywhere. More than 170,000,000 Slavs have a vital interest in their common basic culture, and this research has been made free from any narrow nationalism or race feeling. The culture of the Slavs is little known to the Western world, except through isolated works of art, literature, and music, just as only to the Slav scholars is the great influence of the writings and political movements of the West upon their own cultural development known and appreciated.

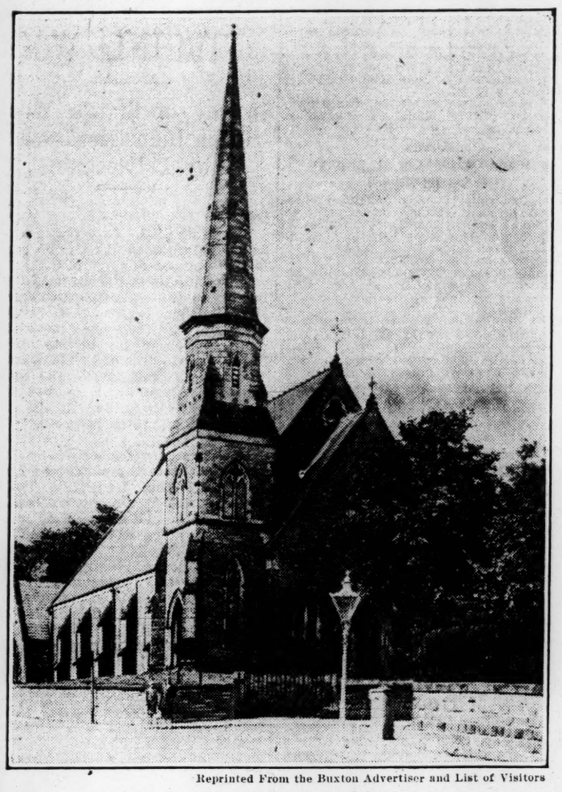
Setting Enhances Church Design



Reprinted From the Buxton Advertiser and List of Visitors

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Buxton, Eng.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EDIFICE OPENED

BUXTON, Eng.—Opening of the edifice of First Church of Christ, Scientist, on Devonshire Road here, formerly the Devonshire Park Church built by the Wesleyans, was reported at length by the Buxton Advertiser and List of Visitors, published here, excerpts from which follow:

"The opening of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Buxton, marked completion of the first reconstruction, which provides comfortable accommodation for 250 in the main hall, with pleasant vestibule, quiet reading room, library, two rooms for officers, and the usual subsidiary facilities.

"The local architect, Charles Flint, is to be congratulated upon the good taste everywhere visible. The color scheme throughout is pale primrose and brown, with plain blue carpets, natural oak woodwork, and bronze electrical fittings and door furniture.

"A unique feature is the lovely natural oak woodwork, designed by a member of the church, including the unique flush oak doors, which give an atmosphere of simplicity and restraint.

"The acquisition of the Devonshire Park Church is the logical result of steady growth."

SEA HEROES HONORED BY PRINCE OF WALES

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

EDINBURGH — Heroic coxswains who have received the silver medals of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution since 1905 were recently presented to the Prince of Wales at a great public meeting held in Usher Hall in Edinburgh. Vellums were handed to a gallant coxswain from Thurso by the Prince.

The hall was full and the seamen were made to feel at home with music rendered by the Newhaven Fisher Girls who wore their picturesque fisherwives dress and sang songs such as "Caller Herrin'."

Coxswain Angus M'Phail of Thurso received his vellums for gallant rescue work on the night of Feb. 2, 1929, when a trawler ran ashore on Brimness and on Sept. 28 of the same year when a cutter with 20 naval ratings from a warship got into difficulties in Thurso Bay.

Some amusement was caused by one of the coxswains walking past the Prince but the latter stepped forward and put him at his ease at once. The Prince suggested a corporate contribution by shipping lines to the lifeboat service of 5s. a ship every year.

Australians to Ship Apples to Glasgow

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

GLASGOW — Arrangements are stated to have been made for the direct shipment of fruit cargoes from Australia to Glasgow following an Australian tour by Harold Ford, secretary of the Clyde Navigation Trust. A program has been arranged with the Blue Funnel Line whereby five steamers are to be berthed for Glasgow next season with refrigerated space for apples from Australia and Tasmania.

The Glasgow merchants concerned are confident that this next season will prove the initiation of a great development of trade with Australia and Tasmania.

BELGIUM ORDERS BIRD PROTECTION

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

BRUSSELS—The Official Journal here has published a royal decree for the protection of birds useful to agriculture or forestry. The decree gives a long list of birds which must be protected, as well as their eggs and their brood.

These birds must at no time be captured or destroyed even on private property or in gardens. It is also forbidden to exhibit, sell or transfer them to different places. On the other hand, it permits the destruction at all times of birds of prey, jays, magpies, ravens and rooks. The finch, tarin, bullfinch, goldfinch and canary can only be caught alive as songsters, but are not to be used as food. The keeping of blind songsters is entirely forbidden. The sea gull, tern, stalk, spoonbill are also forbidden to be exhibited or sold.

HOLLAND-TO-SURINAM MAIL TIME REDUCED

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

AMSTERDAM—Through the co-operation of the Royal Dutch Airlines with the French airline Compagnie General Aero Postale, considerable acceleration will be attained as the mail from the Netherlands will now reach Surinam in about four days.

Mail from Europe now reaches South America in eight days, but by substituting mail boats with hydroplanes on the stretch Dakar in North West Africa to Natal in South Africa, greater speed will be gained. By establishing a sideline of the line Natal-Buenos Aires to Guiana, the French company will establish an air connection with Surinam which is considered a great help to important Dutch trade interests in South America.

Reduce Paid Holidays Railway Men Advise

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

BRISBANE, Queensl.—Fewer paid holidays is one of the recommendations for greater efficiency advised by N. C. Harris, chief mechanical engineer of the Victorian railways, and D. Cameron, chairman of the staff board of the Victorian railways, in their report on the Queensland railway workshops at Ipswich, which has been tabled in Parliament.

Holidays at Ipswich workshops alone cost £44,000 annually, and long service leave £12,000, equal to £28 for each employee, it is pointed out.

The commissioners recommended the adoption of piecework wherever possible, and merit payments where piecework cannot be practiced. If unions object to making agreements regarding piecework, it is recommended that departmental managers be empowered to enter into arrangements with groups of employees. They recommend that long-service leave should be abolished.

The commissioners advocate an increased number of apprentices and greater use of youths on such work as rivet-heating and operating minor machines.

It is recommended that appeals by employees against punishment or dismissal for misdemeanors should not be beyond the Commissioner for Railways. Heads of divisions, it is said, should have the power to dismiss or reduce inefficient employees. The commissioners found that the organization of the mechanical department failed to measure up to modern standards, and the professional service of that division had been "starved" for years. Heavy losses had been incurred through lack of an adequate staff of experienced engineers.

SCALPAY CONGREGATION BACK IN FREE CHURCH

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

GLASGOW—At a meeting of the commission of assembly of the Free Church of Scotland, held lately, the Rev. J. Kennedy Cameron, senior clerk, submitted a petition from the office-bearers, members and adherents of the United Free Church in the island of Scalpay, asking that they be recognized as a congregation of the Free Church of Scotland under the Presbytery of Lewis.

The signatures included those of 350 adherents, and 93 members and office-bearers. It was agreed to grant the petition.

AUSTRALIA PIPES WATER SUPPLY FOR 335 MILES

Rock Catchment Scheme Serves 332 Firms Through Hitherto Dry Region

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

PERTH, W. Aust.—A vast and impressive rock catchment scheme to supply water to nearly 500,000 acres of farms, eight towns and three railway centers in the Lake Brown, Trayning and Bencubbin wheat-growing areas, about 200 miles east of Perth in one of the very dry regions of the State, has just been opened by P. Collier, the Premier.

This water supply scheme consists of three rock catchments—Barbalin, 350 acres in area, with a 40,000,000-gallon dam; Waddouring, 180 acres in area, with a 22,000,000-gallon dam, and Knungajin, 80 acres in area, with an 8,000,000-gallon dam. These dams have service reservoirs of 300,000 gallons, 250,000 gallons, and 150,000 gallons, respectively, and each has a pumping station. The dams are several miles apart, but their waters flow into a common reticulation of 335 miles of pipes which serve 332 farms. The water was available to the farmers last summer and was a great boon to them, but not until January next will they be rated for it. The water rate will then be about eight pence an acre yearly.

The scheme was estimated to cost £267,000, but it has been completed for less than that amount, and the Premier says that the money saved will be used to cover the cost of reticulating the eight towns in the area instead of the towns having to bear the cost themselves.

Speaking at the opening ceremony, which was performed by the Premier, the chairman of the Nungarin road board (Mr. J. Jolly) said: "The scheme is certainly a great one and it saved man and beast last summer." The pioneers of the district, he added, had to spend two days out of every three in the summer carting water 20 or 30 miles and then attend to their farms on the third day.

The Premier said the scheme, which was the third of its kind established in farming areas during the past five years, would enable the farmers to increase the productivity of their lands. The idea of utilizing the rock catchments was new to Australia. In other parts of the continent running streams or artesian water were relied upon for irrigation purposes. The new scheme would enable farms to carry sheep on their holdings in addition to growing wheat.

BRITISH HOSTEL TRAINS BOYS FOR EMIGRATION

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

BEVERLEY, Eng.—The Hull Migration Committee has recently established at Beverley a training hostel for boys between the ages of 14 and 18 years, who intend emigrating to Canada.

This hostel has received subscriptions totalling approximately £2000, including £250 from the Hull Corporation, and it has been so successful that the Sheffield and District Migration Committee has decided to get into touch with the other migration committees of the West Riding with the object of organizing a similar hostel here to be the center of the juvenile emigration activities of the whole riding.

Melbourne Woman Learns Watchmaking

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

MELBOURNE, Vic.—Claiming that it is an ideal occupation for a woman because of the delicacy needed in handling the works, Miss Ethel Tulloch, of Sale, Vic., has established herself in Melbourne as a watchmaker. She is the only woman in the trade in the city.

Miss Tulloch began work in a Sale jeweler's, which at that time sent all repairs to Melbourne, 130 miles away. Realizing the possibilities for a local watchmaker, she transferred to Melbourne and learned the trade as an apprentice.

Four years later, her apprenticeship ended, she was back in Sale in business for herself. Now she has decided to enter the wider business field of Melbourne.

BUILDERS FIND BUSINESS GOOD, SAYS EXECUTIVE

Expansion Program Sure to Benefit Entire Nation, Convention Is Told

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

CHICAGO—Thirty thousand dealers in building material throughout the United States are watching the growing list of construction programs planned for the new year and preparing for increased prosperity in their field, S. W. Campbell, president of the National Builders' Supply Association, told delegates assembled in convention here. Much of the credit for the prevailing optimism he laid at the door of the White House.

"With the railroads planning to spend $1,000,000,000 in improvements, new equipment and expansion; with electric and gas utilities pledged to a $2,000,000,000 expansion and improvement program; with other industries pledged to similar programs, backed by the announced construction programs of our national and state governments, our cities and counties, indications are that business will be good," Mr. Campbell declared.

"It is certain that in those sections of the country where large industries are located, or sections where highways will be built or extensive improvements made, times will be good. In outlying districts, or in districts where big business has no expansion plans, there can be little change from today—perhaps a falling off in business during the first six months. However, with a building program throughout the United States of approximately eight billion dollars, business as a whole should be good."

In the building supply field, he said, the extent of prosperity depends on the dealers themselves. He warned against cut rate selling as harmful to the individual firm as well as the industry.

A steady increase in the membership and influence of national associations organized within large industries was reported by Mr. Campbell, who declared that President Hoover had invited the presidents of 260 such organizations to the Washington conferences, recognizing the increasing importance of their activities. An increase of more than 100 per cent in the attendance at the building supply convention over last year was recorded.

"As the number of delegates increases, the number of salesmen visiting the convention to entertain members of the association in the hope of obtaining sales is decreasing," Mr. Campbell said. "More attention is being paid to business sessions and less to social gatherings. There has been a marked decrease in drinking. The whole atmosphere of the conferences has changed."

The Listener Speaks

WHAT Thursday evenings lack in dramatic entertainments on the air, they make up with the variety of music offered. According to custom, the Serenade at 8 o'clock, through WJZ, featured the scintillating duo-pianists, Phil Ohman and Victor Arden, who played sometimes alone and sometimes with their orchestra in a program of the best kind of popular numbers.

Piano music of a very different kind was heard in the Radio-Victor hour at 10 o'clock through the WEAF chain when Harold Bauer played two groups of numbers. Between these two periods the Seiberling Singers and Singing Violins offered a typical program of most attractive music, including some specially good bass singing.

The Messrs. Ohman and Arden revived something which exactly suited their style in an arrangement of the intriguing melodies from "The Five O'clock Girl." Their orchestra did well with the melodious tunes from "Sweet Adeline" in particular, though its introduction of one of the versatile Noel Coward's songs from "Bitter Sweet" was something to be enjoyed too.

Once again the talkies fraternized with the microphone when Lillyan Tashman "said a few words" in the middle of this program. It appeared that a talkie version of "No No Nanette" has just been completed and Miss Tashman is starred in it. She and the producers feel that it is to be recommended.

The novelty of the introduction of a screen star in a radio program was once an attraction, but this novelty has largely worn off, what with the growth of the practice and with increasing familiarity with the sound of the voices of favorite players in their talking pictures. In these pictures scenario writers have fortunately provided the players with something interesting to say—but left to their own devices before the microphone the latter are usually conspicuously lacking in worth-while ideas.

If the contents of Radio-Victor periods could be rather more widely announced, it is probable that more people would take the trouble of waiting until the late evening to hear them. At the conclusion of the last program, however, those who happened to hear it did learn that Mary Garden is to sing for them soon.

Harold Bauer's playing was a real delight to the ear—particularly in Debussy's "Clair de Lune." Some ballet music from Gluck's "Alceste" was refreshingly dainty and restrained too. In the midst of the outpouring of sound of every kind of complexity which floods the air now the purity of tone of a piano played well is bound to fall pleasantly upon many listening ears. D. M.

CONFERENCE OF ARABS PLANS JEWISH BOYCOTT

JERUSALEM (Jewish Telegraphic Agency)—An Arab Nationalist conference at Amman, Transjordania, decided to demand the full independence of Transjordania, the reduction of taxes, enlarged educational facilities, and unity of all the Arab countries.

The conference also called for the withdrawal of the Balfour declaration and a boycott of the Jews.

GLASGOW WETS WIN BY NARROW MARGIN

EDINBURGH (AP)—Several areas in Scotland have held recently local option elections. In Pollocks Haw's ward, Glasgow, the liquor adherents won by a majority of 44 in the poll of 7358.

Four other wards on the banks of the Clyde also voted for sale of liquor. The village of Culle, in northern Scotland, voted for continuation of "no license."

UNIQUE CHART TELLS STORY OF VIRGINIA WOOD

Survey of State's Wood-Using Industries Issued by Polytechnic

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

BLACKSBURG, Va.—Virginia industries consumed 732,546,857 board feet of lumber during 1928, the November bulletin of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute Engineering Extension Division, issued here, reveals. Trends of the wood-using industries, a description of the forests of the State, various uses of woods noted in Virginia, a directory of the wood-consuming firms by counties and industries are contained in the 170-page bulletin, which is profusely illustrated.

The survey, which took more than nine months to complete, was made by Dr. J. Elton Lodewick, professor of wood technology at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Trends in the industries using wood are shown in tables and charts.

The furniture industry in Virginia, which has shown unusual growth in the past few years, shows the largest change of any of the 25 industries tabulated. In 1911 the furniture industry consumed 2.2 per cent of the total wood used in the State, while in 1928 it used 108,688,898 board feet, which is 14.8 per cent of the total consumption. Only boxes and shooks and tanning extract industries consumed a larger percentage of wood. Pulp, planing mill products, cooperage stock, general millwork, baskets and crates, veneers, excelsior, boat and shipbuilding, car construction are other industries which consumed more than 10,000,000 board feet during 1928.

In a description of the forests of Virginia, the bulletin points out: "Virginia is not meeting her own needs for forest products. The timber lands of Virginia have potentialities of producing enough lumber, extract wood, fuel, mine props and ties to supply the needs of its citizens," the bulletin continues.

Virginia concerns make use of 59 varieties of wood, the survey revealed. A brief description of every specie is included and the uses to which it is put advantageously are numerated.

TAX CUT LEGISLATION PUT FIRST IN SENATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — After once taking up the $160,000,000 tax resolution today, the Senate later was forced to make a record decision between consideration of the tax cut and the tariff bill, and voted overwhelmingly to go ahead with taxes.

John J. Blaine (R.), Senator from Wisconsin refused to permit the tariff bill to be laid aside temporarily for consideration of the resolution when the tariff measure automatically came before the Senate. Senator Smoot, chairman of the Finance Committee, thereupon moved to go ahead with the tax resolution and his motion was carried, 60 to 15, Democratic and Republican leaders joining in its support.

THE HOME FORUM

The Fireside and the Book

THE first fire of the fall always gives one a soft touch of gentleness as well as a friendly feeling. A fire is not merely warmth and light and comfort, it is "a companion and an inspiration." To those who cherish their possessions none is more alluring than the room where the fireplace is, and the hearthrug. The eyes of memory can kindle the colors of many hearthrugs whose warmth and glow are among the most durable satisfactions of human living. Adown the years we speed, and wherever we may go, whatever realms to see, the heart can sing nowhere as it does around the fireside.

When the logs are burning free
When the fire is full of glee;
When each heart gives out its best.

One thinks that it will always be true that where there is heart-room there will always be hearth-room. Hence, around the first fire of the fall one can enthusiastically exclaim—

O, ye fire and heat, bless ye the Lord!

But it is not till winter comes that we enter most deeply and truly into these possessions. It was of such a time that Whittier wrote his greatest poem.

Blow high, blow low, not all the snow
Could quench our hearth-fire's ruddy glow.

There is a protest within me against the materialism of our times which would put out the fire and put into our homes all sorts of modern heating devices. These modern materialists have nearly taken the candle from us, and the lamp, except for decorative purposes and when we aim to be artistic. Occasionally I stumble across examples of the human instinct for an ideal home finding expression in an electric bulb camouflaged as a candle, or a stark radiator is reddened with the glow of burning gas. Some primal necessity in us wants to see the fire; some deeply ingrained faculty responds to a friendly blaze, the leaping shadows which it throws upon the walls of the room, the golden lacquer with which it burnishes furniture and pictures. And this is the more especially true when the fire is made of lordly logs. All fires are friendly indeed, but the wood fire is the greatest friend, because it is the oldest. When mankind discovered fire great progress was made in the upward climb, but when the wood fire was made he achieved manhood!

In the red glow of a clean hearth we see, in imagination, the sunshine caught in the forest glades of the far past. Through many springs and summers the blazing logs sucked in the sunshine and the songs of birds and the deep meanings of the wood and the glade, and now, as their flames dance up the chimney, they bridge all the years, from modern suburbia back to the neolithic age, from the cave-dweller to the cozy corner of the modern dwelling where we sit and dream. "Drama and dream are rife," as Don Marquis suggests, in the logs ablaze;

And in the sap that leaps and sings
We hear again the chant the cricket flings
Across the hawthorn-scented dusks of May.

As the logs gossip out of endless memories their conversation is mingled with the fragrance of the open air distilled to its almost quintessential essence. As they keep one another warm the logs seem to say:

In home's heart! warmth I give and light,
If you but feed me.
I blossom in the night
When you most need me.

It is the heart makes the home, and for thousands of Anglo-Saxons Home and Hearth go together.

It was with reflections such as these that I, the other evening, began to possess my possessions. The air outside was sharp and cold. Florence Kate has fulfilled for many summers, in more senses than one, what Charles Wagner wrote—"When a man and a woman agree to belong to each other, and to establish a home, the lines of their destiny merge, and their essential interests become identical." So it was when, supper over, we all repaired to the library, that Florence Kate had kindled a fire whose crackling logs threw beauty all around.

And I said, pulling young America to my knee,—"The compensations of short days are social intercourse and what Cowper calls 'instructive ease.' Who cares for winter when a fire like this burns upon the hearth, and it wants nearly five hours to midnight."

It is impossible to sit and look at a fire from the vantage of a hearthrug and not feel something of the warmth of old wisdom stealing into one's thought. The globe is the product of fire, the heart of the earth is probably a fire. Old tribal loyalties played around the glowing logs. Visions that are good for men to see, and dreams combined of memory and prophecy began to weave a fairy fabric. And young America occasionally brought one's thoughts with a thump to the carpet of common things! Whilst Florence Kate told a bedtime story I looked at the woman of leisure in the firelight. She has largely gone (I said to myself) and my thoughts roamed back to the times when woman was the uncomplaining mate of man (historically!), and up to the feminist movement of modern days. But after young America had gone to the land of dreams, and a glance at Florence Kate revealed her plying the needle and the pattern growing, my thoughts became too active; I wanted to cultivate too many points of view. So I reached for a book. What book should it be?

"Sir," said a great man, "a good book is one you can hold in your hand and take to the fire." Now this ruled out many books for my evening's reading; for there are few books which can with any propriety be treated as the quotation suggests. My experience is that few books can be brought to the hearthrug and hold one's steadfast attention. Yet, mark you, I did not hesitate in my choice at this moment. My thoughts needed bringing to a focal point, and with that I longed for inner enrichment. It is an art to know where to go under such conditions. My hand reached for a slender volume of just over three hundred pages, pocket size, by Alexander Smith. It bears the title "Dreamthorp." And if you want to know it more intimately here it is: "Dreamthorp—a castle, a chapel, a lake, a straggling strip of gray houses, with a blue film of smoke over all—lies embossed in emerald. Summer, with its daisies, runs up to our very cottage door. From the little height where I am now sitting, I see it beneath me. Nothing could be more peaceful. The wind and the birds fly over it. A passing sunbeam makes brilliant a white gable-end, and brings out the colors of the blossomed almond tree beyond, and disappears. I see figures in the street, but hear them not. The hands on the church clock seem always pointing to one hour. Time has fallen asleep in the afternoon sunshine. I make a frame of my fingers, and look at my picture. On the walls of the next Academy's Exhibition will hang nothing half so beautiful. . . . Such a secluded place is Dreamthorp that the railway does not come near, and the canal is the only thing that connects it with the world." For about twenty delectable pages writing of this character and style leads one, to end at last on this deep and serene note.

An idle life I live in this place, as the world counts it; but then I have the satisfaction of differing from the world as to the meaning of idleness. A windmill twirling its arms all day is admirable only when there is corn to grind. Twirling its arms for the mere barren pleasure of twirling them, or for the sake of looking busy, does not deserve any rapturous pæan of praise. I must be made happy after my own fashion, not after the fashion of other people. Here I can live as I please, here I can throw the reins on the neck of my whim. Here I play with my own thoughts.

This is a fine Declaration of Independence for the slippered ease of the hearthrug and the cozy warmth of a wood fire! On, on I read through pages of finely chiseled sentences and paragraphs as beautiful as Florentine pictures,— homeborn happiness,

Fireside enjoyments, intimate delights,
And all the comforts that the lowly roof
Of undisturbed retirement, and the hours
Of long uninterrupted evening know.

Bridges

Rain

Rain drops
Are bridges of silver
Swinging between heaven and earth
Bearing traffic
One way.

In Japan

The bridge
A crescent moon
Mistakes her mirrored self,
"My half is made a whole," she says,
Waiting.

Words

A word
Is a bridge hung
Between your thought and mine.
"Warning: Foot traffic only!
Birds, use wings!"

Now

Now is
The strangest bridge of all,
Joining what once was
With everything that is
To be.

Player-Piano

In rooms where I lived with a player-piano, my landlady came in impulsively one evening, most deeply moved, with tears in her eyes, hardly able to express herself about such "wonderful music." The particular piece of music which had meant so much for her, whenever she had recently heard it, till finally she had to speak about it, was the Adagio sostenuto of the Opus 106 Sonata—music that is commonly regarded as reserved for the elect. She had lived with it for a year or more, and at last Beethoven had spoken to her, as he spoke to me, and as he is waiting to speak to so many, if they only had the chance to hear and would learn to listen. . . .

The more I think of it the more I feel that the biggest hope lies in the player-piano. It opens out such great possibilities that I have wished it were not at the command of many to be played so atrociously that its name becomes a reproach, or to stand idle in grand houses, and find its highest usefulness as an accessory for an impromptu dance. When one sees such degradation and waste of its magical powers, one longs that the whole supply might be commandeered, and issued by an all-wise musical providence to men and women here and there (I could send in several names) in whose lives it would make a simply incredible difference.

For my own part I give thanks without ceasing to the discoverers . . . of it. . . . The only experience with which its advent can be compared, and has often been compared, is a bookish boy's first discovery of the world that reading opens up. Seriously, I believe that such an invention may yet enlarge the life of common men (those, I mean, not experts and specialists in music, as there were in the Middle Ages experts and specialists in manuscripts) almost as much as the invention of printing did. Sometimes I think of all the lovely things of which the story-makers used to dream in the old days—magic carpets, helmets of invisibility, inexhaustible purses, touchstones that turned everything to gold. And I declare solemnly and deliberately that if I had the choice of all such miraculous treasures, and a player-piano were added to the list, I should unhesitatingly ask for it, as by far the most profitable miracle of them all.—From "A Musical Pilgrim's Progress," by J. D. M. ROBKE.

ARTISTS enjoy the routine of a workman. It is a pleasure to have a job of work on hand. There may be a certain amount of impatience with the first stages of a painting and the longing to be through with it, but when he "gets going" there is pleasure in a regular spell of painting. Such were the conditions under which this picture of Gerona was completed.

For a week, the artist set out every morning except one, with paint box, easel and canvas, and walked to Montjuich, otherwise known as the Hill of the Capucins, about twenty minutes from the hotel. The desired sunny weather was not forthcoming one morning when thundery clouds moved over the mountains and so interrupted the painting. The rest of the time was marked by perfect summer conditions such as one may expect during June in Spain. What a joy it was to pitch one's easel in the hollow by the hillside mule-track outside the old city wall, away from curious spectators and paint! A good-natured "Pintor!" would greet one onthe way, from children who would have preferred to follow the artist through the streets in full force rather than go schoolwards.

The sun was sweltering by the time the chosen spot was reached, and sleeves were rolled up to commence work, although it was the early part of the morning. A white umbrella was essential, and it seemed necessary to veil the head with a big handkerchief to prevent the flies from tickling one's ears! Painting under a cloudless sky is not so easy as in the gray light one so often gets in England, but summer was present in all its glory. Bees hummed in the blossom-decked hedgerows, butterflies and dragon flies of brilliant hues flitted among the wildflowers. An army of ants threaded their way in a column several yards long between the rocks near by. Lizards round about rustled in the dry grass, and perched themselves for a moment on the bare stones where they stared surprisedly, and then darted away under cover.

The stillness of the scene was occasionally disturbed by the passage of parties of carabineros to and from the rifle range situated in the old fortress on the crest of the hill, while the intermittent cracking of rifles contrasted with the solemn and monotonous clanging of bells in the city churches at intervals throughout the morning.

The roar of a train on the main Paris-Barcelona route would be heard now and again as it hurtled across the steel bridge spanning the River Tor below. Some minutes sooner or later tiny white puffs of smoke could be seen floating over the sun-scorched valley as the train proceeded on its journey.

The shrill whistle of the tall funneled locomotives on the local narrow gauge line was also frequently heard.

Every morning a rotund little man carrying gardening tools would come plodding up the hill to work on his plot of land. Each time he would pause to note the progress of the painting. One morning on his return he stopped to hand the artist an old coin which he had unearthed, and then explained that relics of the past were continually coming to light in the neighborhood of the old city walls. Gerona had been besieged no fewer than twenty-five times in the course of its existence.

Sometimes a man wearing a bright blue or green shirt, and a broad and brilliantly colored waistband, would lend a touch of color to the sun-bleached landscape as he trudged by, and occasionally women would appear on the scene gathering aniseed or snails.

The Gothic cathedral which dominates this view is somewhat ungainly in appearance, but it is interesting in so far that it contains one of the widest pointed vaults in Christendom.

Dagny's Morning

Dagny paused with her hand on the knob of the unopened door. Through the open window at the top of the back stairs came softly the roll of the incoming tide, and a shaft of morning sunshine poured down on the little servant girl's pale gold head, where the braids were drawn smooth across the parting in the middle of the forehead. The head was bent with the look of listening—waiting. But there was no sound in the house, nothing; she waited; the pause was a moment left over from dreams and sleep, a long suspiring moment such as comes when a bird rests on the wing before the next steep upward beat of wings. She opened the door and went in.

The kitchen greeted her. The stove and shelves and table looked familiar to her, and from under the dresser the row of pots with the sparkle of sunshine on them shone at her. The water faucet in the sink dripped and lisped and dripped monotonously. This was something of herself she had left and now came back to, this scrubbed order that bore the mark of her hands. . . . She saw the mug with the pink rabbits on it standing on the table, and it told Dagny that Bimmy's wide-awake little voice in the night had demanded a drink of water from her mother. Fruen had rinsed the mug and dried it, Dagny saw, Fruen who was always exquisite and thoughtful, even with the long braid over her shoulder and sleep still in her eyes.

As Dagny filled the kettle at the sink a sun ray caught the water splashing into the kettle mouth and made a tiny rainbow there; the dapple of light refractions danced on the ceiling and the room was full of the hilarity of running water. Dagny shook the drops from her fingers, singing, and put the kettle on the stove. The popping gas spread a flat flame under the kettle and settled to the thread of a whistle, like an accompaniment to the song that Dagny hummed—a Danish song about a lover calling his lass a "little red mountain-ash berry." She took a bowl from the shelf over the stove, full of a puffy mound of bread well risen, and higher, very softly, went her song, like a bird going into the sky. . . . She stood still and listened, but the only sound was of the rising tide, coming in steadily, certainly. Yet she scarcely heard it more than she heard her breath go out and in, for the sea had been always with her. . . .

The sea lay a shining patch of blue between two grey old houses opposite. The sky was golden with young light where its rim came down to the rim of the sea, but the depths of its bowl was blue, and the sea deepened the blue and returned it. The street was quiet with early morning emptiness. There was a brightness of dew on the scant, rocky lawns before the old houses, and on the flowers showing in snatches where the steep gardens staggered down the cliff to the water.

Dagny was poised again in another moment of lingering dream. . . . and there the memory merged with the fairy tale that Bimmy loved best to hear.

There was a high little voice now, like a bird call, joyously demanding, coming from somewhere above near an open window. "Mamadee!" Bimmy shook the crib-side till it rattled.

Dagny's face brightened, and she ran out on the stoop where the summer sunlight lay in a pool, to bring in the milk bottles. She put a mugful to warm on the stove.

There was a patter of light feet overhead. Dagny gave an anxious glance through the oven door and stood up, her cheeks softened and curving in an eager smile. Bimmy flung the door open and scampered in.

"Hello! It's morning time. I want my milk."

Dagny lifted her into the high-chair, and there Bimmy sat, with the sun in delight hitting up fantastic high spots of color on red cheeks, yellow head, and bright blue dressing-gown. . . . At sight of her porridge she demanded the Story, by way of a bargain for eating. Dagny drew up her stool and began haphazard; it was all enchantment to Bimmy, and to the little servant girl herself it was confused, a vague, magic memory.

"And down at the bottom of the sea was a wonderful kingdom, with beautiful gardens, and the fishes swam there, all colors. And there the little mermaid played, and she was happy all day long."

Bimmy stared with round eyes, her mouth full, and Dagny went on slowly, dreamily, hunting the words in careful English while the tide murmured, washing up over the rocks.—LOUISE REDFIELD PEATTIE, in "Dagny."

Happy Turning-Point

The bobolinks stopped singing. The grass was cut, the hay gathered in, nests were emptied of their broods, and the year settled down into sober middle-age, prophetic of graver things. Alas! before long we were lighting the lamps and abandoning the piazza. Alas! presently the sweet-william was past, and the tiger lily and the Persian lily buried once more in the charitable earth the summer warfare which they wage in all well-ordered New England gardens. Then came the early frosts and the turning leaves, and the level line of advancing night on the face of the eastern mountain in the midst of the afternoon. After that, the "wild west wind," and the flying leaves, and the dark and solemn mountains, and no afternoon at all.

So the gradual season declined, until the tardy sun at last came all too late upon an outstripping world which could no longer wait for it; and finding mankind at breakfast and the day's work well under way, sadly concluded that, after all, it formed no indispensable adjunct to the earth, and after wandering aimlessly for a few minutes about a small southern section of the sky, with nothing at all to do, dropped out of sight again.

We have come a dim sad way.

But now! With what a long breath we greet the twenty-first of December. It has in it all the promise of the still so distant summer. It has the song of thrushes and the fragrance of Hepaticas. It gives us back green grass, our leaves, and our running brooks. All we have to do is to wait a little and we shall see. It may be that even to-morrow we shall be saying to one another, "Don't you notice how much longer the days are growing? See, the lamp isn't lighted yet." And surely within the week, surely by Christmas Day, the improvement will be marked. An added lustre comes into the sky, the sun plucks up heart and returns from the south, resuming his martial air. There is no more to dread for the worst is over, the better begins, and the best follows hard behind. Most beautiful, joyous day!

At this point, perhaps, some gentle reader, who has already drawn in his breath half a dozen times, impatient to speak, will no longer be denied. "When the days begin to lengthen, then the cold begins to strengthen," he quotes impressively.

Yes, we had not forgotten that wise adage. But there are two sides to wisdom as in everything. "When the cold begins to strengthen, then the days begin to lengthen," sounds just as sententious, rhymes just as well, runs as euphoniously. Why should we not adopt the inverted rendering. . . .

Hail, then, Optimist's Day, coming now to cheer us! Out of its cold and darkness, out of its wintry gloom, its incredibly short hours, we shall snatch true heart's content. What if we do have to light the lamp at 4 p. m.? To-morrow we may light it at 4:01.—ZEPHINE HUMPHREY, in "The Edge of the Woods."

God, the All-in-all

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

THE Scriptures teach that God is All-in-all, and that the work of His Christ is to make this spiritual fact so clear that eventually all may understand this great verity. From the statement of John the Baptist, "The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand," made when Christ Jesus was commencing his public ministry, it can be seen that the truth about God was manifested through the Son of God, the Christ which Jesus revealed. Therefore Christ, as the complete expression of God, can be recognized as the perfect reflection of God, manifesting all power. Thus, God's allness will finally be so fully revealed to human consciousness that the Christ, Truth, will have subdued all things; and the Father will then be completely understood through the son. Paul told the Corinthians that with the complete subjection of "all things" to the Christ, it would then appear that the Christ is in complete subjection to God, the source of all power, so that, as Paul wrote, "God may be all in all."

Christian Science presents the theme of God's allness as a spiritual fact, a fact which can be demonstrated through the understanding of the divine Principle of this Science. Every demonstration of overcoming materiality, including sin, disease, and death, through Truth as revealed by this Science of Christianity, is a step of progress toward the ultimate realization of God as All-in-all. Each proof of the verities of Christian Science in human betterment proves the Biblical statement, "The Lord he is God; there is none else beside him."

The truth of the allness of God and His idea, as taught in Christian Science, is frequently stated in the writings of Mary Baker Eddy, and is simply declared on page 103 of her textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures": "The maximum of good is the infinite God and His idea, the All-in-all." This inspired revelator thus teaches that God, Spirit, is infinite good, perfect and eternal; and that the universe, including man in God's likeness, constitutes His idea.

This universe including man, being the infinite expression of God, Spirit, is therefore spiritual and perfect. From this premise the conclusion is drawn that the spiritual universe and spiritual man, including all right ideas, are the "in-all" of Mrs. Eddy's phrase, "All-in-all." Hence, in Christian Science, man's true spiritual selfhood is as perfect as the Father-Mother God is perfect; and sin, sickness, and death cannot be included in perfection, in the primeval creation of the one creator, God. The discords referred to are states of error, the effects of the carnal mind referred to by Paul in his epistle to the Romans; and these supposititious effects, being seen as error, illusion, are destroyed by Christ, Truth. Thus sick and sinful mortals are healed of the sufferings and sorrows which throng the night of material sense; and, with the light of Truth, which disperses the darkness of error, "joy cometh in the morning."

However little mortals may have perceived and utilized this light of Truth and this joy, yet these are always here, and always helpful as a means for praise, strength, and healing as taught in Christian Science. Although in substance and extent the spiritual fact which supports the theme and inspires power is far above human comprehension, even when one is illumined by liberating spiritual sense, yet a little child can prove its power to lift thought above sickness and find healing through childlike faith in God's all-power.

A little child who had been suffering from an attack of influenza for a period was receiving treatment in Christian Science, and was not doubting its power to cure his malady. One morning his mother approached his bed and found him in a happy state. He answered her salutation by gladly saying: "Mother, I am healed! I have thought it out. God is All-in-all, and I am one of the 'in-all'; so, I am healed!" The child was soon out of bed, and well. He evidently had reasoned that since God was his Father, as God's child he could not manifest anything unlike God; and surely influenza could not be in the divine intelligence, the Father of all that is real!

It may be said that fear and doubt among adults or children concerning God's ability and willingness to heal both sin and sickness by spiritual means, are due to the influence of erroneous teachings and material theories which aver that God cannot be known, and that He is not near at hand, but far away. In this day there is no excuse for such theories; for revelation and demonstration now give mankind a true and satisfying basis for hope and achievement. Mrs. Eddy writes in Science and Health (p. 596), "Paganism and agnosticism may define Deity as 'the great unknowable;' but Christian Science brings God much nearer to man, and makes Him better known as the All-in-all, forever near."

The Choir on Its Way

"Times have changed from the times they used to be," said Mail, regarding nobody can tell what interesting old panoramas with an inward eye, and letting his outward glance rest on the ground, because it was as convenient a position as any. "People don't care much about us now! I've been thinking, we must be almost the last left in the county of the old string-players. Barrel-organs, and they next door to 'em that you blow wi' your foot, have come in terribly of late years."

"Ah!" said Bowman, shaking his head; and old Williams, on seeing him, did the same thing.

"More's the pity," replied another. "Time was—long and merry ago now!—when not one of the varmits was to be heard of; but it served some of the choirs right. They should have stuck to strings as we did, and keep out clar'nets, and done away with serpents. If you'd thrive in musical religion, stick to strings, says I."

"Strings are well enough, so far as that goes," said Mr. Spinks.

"There's worse things than serpents," said Mr. Penny. "Old things pass away, 'tis true; but a serpent was a good old note: a deep rich tone was the serpent."

"Clar'nets, however, be bad at all times," said Michael Mail. . . .

"I can well bring back to my mind," said Mr. Penny, "what I said to poor Joseph Ryme (who took the tribble part in High-Story Church for two-and-forty year) when they thought of having clar'nets there. 'Joseph,' I said, says I, 'depend upon 't, if so be you have them tooting clar'nets you'll spoil the whole set-out. Clar'nets were not made for the service of Providence; you can see it by looking at 'em,' I said. And what cam o't? Why, my dear souls, the parson set up a barrel-organ on his own account within two years o' the time I spoke, and the old choir went to nothing."

"As far as looks is concerned," said the tranter, "I don't for my part see that a fiddle is much nearer heaven than a clar'net. 'Tis farther off. There's always a rakish, scampish countenance about a fiddle that seems to say the Wicked One had a hand in making o' en; while angels be supposed to play clar'nets in heaven, or som'at like 'em, if ye may believe picters."

"Robert Penny, you were in the right," broke in the eldest Dewy. "They should ha' stuck to strings. Your brass-man, is brass—well and good; your reed-man, is reed—well and good; your percussion man, is percussion—good again. But I don't care who hears me say it, nothing will speak to your heart wi' the sweetness of the man of strings!" . . .

"And harmoniums," William continued, in a louder voice, and getting excited by these signs of approval, "harmoniums and barrel-organs" ("Ah!" and groans from Spinks) "be miserable—what shall I call 'em—miserable—"

"Sinners," suggested Jimmy, who made large strides like the men, and did not lag behind like the other little boys.—THOMAS HARDY, in "The Return of the Native."

CAMBRIDGE AND OXFORD TIE 1-1

Both Goals Contrast Sharply With 'Poor Finishing' of the Forwards

By Radio from Monitor Bureau

STAMFORD BRIDGE GROUND, London—Two splendid goals, which contrasted sharply with "generally poor finishing" of the forwards on both sides, were shared by Oxford and Cambridge, here, Thursday in the fifty-second intervarsity Association football match for which the Light Blues started firm favorites. This result, the seventh draw of the series that has provided Oxford with 23 victories and Cambridge with 22, gives a very accurate indication of how evenly honors were shared in a vigorous battle between Oxford's sterling defense and Cambridge's incisive attack. That is to say, incisive up to the point.

The Light Blues showed superior combination to the rival line and progressed toward the goal by more polished methods, but when it came to the important matter of shooting they were certainly no better than Oxford, if as good. Standing out vividly from the background of missed opportunities, half speed shots and "front-of-goal" errors of other kinds, are the two scores of the match. Both occurred in the second half. Oxford's came two minutes after the restart and Cambridge's not long before the finish. Each in its way was a gem.

Bradshaw Scores

The Oxonians were raiding on the left wing, and from there the ball came in to G. T. Ansell, who let drive a tremendous shot straight at the goalkeeper. The leather rebounded off the Cambridge captain almost to the foot of W. H. Bradshaw, Oxford's centerhalf, and this untiring worker, without the least hesitation, took a "first-time" shot in full stride and sent the ball crashing into the net.

Cambridge's ripost was equally spectacular. G. C. Grant, inside right, passed to Center Forward G. D. Kemp-Welch, and the latter drove a left-footed shot obliquely past the Oxford goalkeeper, H. M. Garland-Wells, English amateur international.

The defenses on both sides brought great credit to themselves for sheer hard work and persistence. Between the opposing pairs of fullbacks there was little or nothing to choose—J. A. Cook, Cambridge, rightback, was indeed not far removed from being the best player on the field—but at halfback the Dark Blues had a distinct advantage. Bradshaw in center "shadowed" Kemp-Welch closely throughout, and A. T. Barber and P. G. T. Kingsley did equally good work on the left and right of him. This meant the Cambridge forwards had very little scope for operations and emphasizes the skill in making as much ground as they did and as often as they did. The Cambridge halfbacks, especially R. R. Vassar-Smith on the left pegged away steadily, and as the attack they had to deal with was not particularly well co-ordinated they were able to succeed by qualities other than unadorned footballing.

Rivals Crash With Zest

The intervarsity game is a most refreshing affair in these days of league soccer from which the vigorous personal contact is being eliminated by the referees. There would have been a continuous symphony on the whistle if Thursday's had been an ordinary game, but as it was the rivals crashed into each other with the heartiest zest and stood on each rather than on the faintest semblance of ceremony, and did it with the utmost good cheer.

It was nothing unusual to see sections of the field littered with people, who, for some reason or other, had deviated from the perpendicular—and the crowd, such as it was, enjoyed matters immensely. In its way it was almost as exciting as Tuesday's Rugby match, without the same glamour or public interest, and for the Oxford partisans it supported the rugger match in refuting allegations of sporting "decadence," about which so much has been heard in recent years.

The summary:

ST. PAUL, Minn.—St. Paul moved up in the American Hockey Association here Thursday night by a 3-to-1 triumph over Duluth.

It was the second victory in three nights for the home team which defeated Minneapolis Tuesday. Desjardines, star center for St. Paul, played brilliantly to win individual laurels and score his team's three goals, one in each period. The summary:

ST. PAUL	DULUTH
Conroy, Thorsteinson, lw	rw, Forslund, Merrill
Desjardines, Rennie, c	c, Scott, Mitchell
Wilson, Morrison, rw	lw, Green, Goodman
Goheen, Sande, ld	rd, Davis, Daley
Borland, Mulligan, rd	ld, Langlois, Bergl
Stark, g	g, Turner

Score—St. Paul 3, Duluth 1. Goals—Desjardines 3 for St. Paul; Scott for Duluth. Assists—Borland for St. Paul; Forslund for Duluth. Referee—Carl Battell, Moose Jaw. Time—Three 20m. periods.

PHELAN TO COACH WASHINGTON

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—James M. Phelan, football coach at Purdue University on Thursday afternoon authorized the statement that he had signed a four-year contract to coach the University of Washington football team. Phelan declined to state the amount of salary called for in the contract, but persons who are close to him declared it was for $15,000 annually.

Two Major Leagues Combine in Joint Baseball Meeting

Each Club May Have 15 Players on Option Instead of Eight—Scoring Rules Will Be 'Codified, Unified and Clarified'

NEW YORK (AP)—The winter major league baseball profession on Thursday moved from one hotel lobby to another, but the result was much the same. The American and National Leagues, after holding their annual session for two days, combined in a joint meeting, but nothing of vital importance to the national game developed from the larger conference.

The club owners of both leagues agreed with Jacob J. Ruppert, president of the New York Yankees, that the number of players on option by each major league club should be 15 instead of eight and that it should be possible to send players out on option for three years instead of two, as provided by the present baseball law. However, the minors will have to agree before a change can be made.

A committee of four from each league will confer with the minors on matters concerning the relationship between the two branches. Concessions will be offered the minors if they will agree to increase the number and length of options. Possibly the minors will ask in return that the majors agree not to sign college players.

Players Cannot Delay

In the future, players whose contracts are transferred from one club to another must report to their new employer within 72 hours, except in the case of athletes called from the Pacific coast to the East.

The question of "common ownership" of baseball clubs, the so-called "chain store system," came in for discussion, including an extended address by Samuel Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, the most extensive dealer in wholesale baseball talent in the game. Mr. Breadon read telegrams from presidents of minor leagues, ranging from A to D, indorsing major league ownership of minor league clubs, including the Western, Texas, I.I.I., Central, Piedmont, Blue Ridge and Eastern Carolina leagues and South Atlantic and Western Associations. The discussion on this subject was received as information, but the several major league owners who are interested in minor league investments, seemed satisfied that nothing would be done to interfere with their operations.

The question of radiocasting of baseball games did not come up.

As a result of efforts launched by the Baseball Writers Association of America, the scoring rules will be "codified, unified and clarified." The scoring rules in the two major leagues are not in complete accord and there are points not clear which a committee from the writers will untangle and prepare instructions to scorers of baseball games everywhere. The committee consists of James B. Harrison, John B. Foster, A. Munro Elias, New York and Harry Bullion, Detroit.

Scorers to Be Appointed

The major leagues also acquiesced in a proposal from the writers that the scorers for each club be appointed by the league presidents on the advice of the club presidents and local chapters of the baseball writers for one year, with two alternates to serve in the absence of the scorer and with a provision that a man failing to measure up to the exacting standards of efficient scoring be removed.

Three appropriations were made totaling $65,000, and to take care of the increase the baseball commissioner will deduct 15 per cent of the next World Series gross, instead of 10 per cent as has been the case in recent years.

The two leagues will continue to support the American Legion program of junior baseball, $50,000 being set aside for this purpose. The National Amateur Athletic Federation was voted $10,000 and a part of this sum will be spent in providing expert instruction to coaches of sandlot and school teams throughout the country. Leslie A. Mann, former major league outfielder and a deep student of the game, will be the instructor. Five thousand dollars was appropriated for the Association of Professional Baseball Players of America, an organization devoted to caring for former players no longer able to care for themselves.

RESULT THURSDAY

Springfield 2, Boston 1.

Again the Springfield Indians defeated the Boston Tigers in a Canadian-American Hockey League game at the Boston Garden winning Thursday night by a score of 2 to 1. As on the last occasion the locals had had a hard game the previous night and after playing well at the start were unable to maintain the pace. The visitors' goalie, Lamontagne, featured for the Indians making spectacular saves during all three periods. Although Reaume, local net guardian, did not have as many chances some of them were remarkable when the local defense faltered and let the Indian attacks in on him. As a result of the win Springfield is third in the league standing.

At the start of the game the Tigers swept in on the Springfield net almost continuously and scored their only goal after three minutes of play when the puck went in off Boyd's skate on a pass from Waite. The Indians tied the score in the second period when Murphy converted a pass from Carrigan although it looked like it might have been deflected in from Reaume's skate or stick. The winning goal was a nice bit of combination and the only really earned score with Carrigan completely fooling Reaume on Callighen's pass. The summary:

SPRINGFIELD	BOSTON
Dillon, Filken, lw	c, Boyd, Mills
Carrigan, Maracle, Wilson, c	c, Waite, Burke
Heller, Siebert, rw	lw, Loucks, Heyd
Callighen, Murphy, rd	ld, Oatman, Regan

IOWA'S READMISSION IN SPORTS BRIGHTER

CHICAGO (AP)—The University of Iowa's action in declaring ineligible athletes who benefited by the Athletic Fund, has brightened its prospect of early readmission to athletic competition in the Western Conference.

Frederic Woodward, vice-president of the University of Chicago, and its representative on the faculty committee, said Iowa should be given an early hearing if it files notice of another appeal.

Prof. Omera F. Long, Northwestern University's representative, said the action had placed Iowa in "a favorable light," and he indicated he anticipated the committee would visit Iowa City soon to review the situation.

Prof. Ralph W. Aigler of the University of Michigan, indicated that a renewal of Iowa's plea would be favorably received by the committee.

At the annual University of Wisconsin football banquet Thursday night, Athletic Director George E. Little, insisted on the term "Big Ten," saying he hoped and believed that Iowa would be restored within a reasonable length of time.

DISTANCE RUNNER ARRIVES IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK (AP)—Stanislaw Petkiewicz, great Polish distance runner who has beaten Paavo Nurmi of Finland, among others, has arrived in the United States to run a little and to investigate how American educational, judicial and legislative institutions are run. He is a law student in the University of Warsaw.

Holder of every Polish record from 800 to 10,000 meters Petkiewicz said he was at his best at distances from 2000 to 3000 meters. It was at the latter distance that he conquered Nurmi in Warsaw a few months ago.

Although he never has competed indoors, the Polish star probably will be invited to run in a number of meets here this winter. He said Thursday that he was not in condition, but that a few weeks of training probably will make him fit again.

PRESIDENT PRAISES TEAM

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (AP)—Praising the efforts of the Brown University football team in victory and defeat, in one of the hardest schedules ever arranged for a Bruin team, Dr. Clarence A. Parmour, president of the university, charged the men with the responsibility of maintaining their academic standing through this year, speaking before the annual football dinner tendered by Fred C. MEXICO LEADS IN SERIES WITH CUBA

Wins Two Singles Matches at Lawn Tennis

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Mexico won the first two matches of the third annual series of tennis matches with Cuba for the Hidalgo Cup Thursday. Ignaco de la Borbolla and Ricardo Tapia triumphed in the opening singles encounters, leaving the Mexican team with only one more victory needed to capture the trophy donated by President Machado of Cuba.

Borbolla scored an easy victory over Ricardo Morales of Cuba in the morning match by scores of 6—2, 6—1, 6—3. In the afternoon Tapia defeated Gustavo Vollmer, 3—6, 3—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4.

In the morning match Morales tried to play a forecourt game, but could not cope with Borbolla's steady cross-court drives. The Mexican's shots forced Morales to make many errors. Morales rallied in the third set to tie at 3—3, but lost the next three games on double faults and drives into the net.

OTTAWA, Ont.—After coming from behind twice to tie the score, in the first and second periods, the Boston Bruins held up against the strong back checking of the Ottawa Senators in Thursday's National Hockey League game and when Shore had given them the lead after eight minutes' play in the third period they held the locals at bay and took a 3-to-2 victory away with them. The Bruins turned in a clever performance against the faster locals, but they needed a brilliant effort on the part of Thompson in goal to keep the locals from winning in the last half of the final period. In fact Thompson's display kept the visitors in the game in the first two periods when the locals had the edge in the territorial play.

Clancy opened the scoring after six minutes' play but Clapper, Weiland and Gainor combined for the equalizer 90 seconds later only to have Shields send the locals in front before the end of the period on a pass from Finnigan.

Clapper and Weiland combined for the only goal of the middle period and in the final Shore snapped up a forward from Hitchman for the winning goal. The victory left Boston well in front of their nearest rivals, while the loss kept the locals tied with the Canadiens for the leadership of the Canadian group standing. The summary:

BOSTON		OTTAWA

NEW YORK—The New York Rangers and the Montreal Canadiens indulged in the fastest National Hockey League game of the season Thursday and when the final bell rang the locals had scored 8 goals to 3. It was Boucher's day in the scoring with two goals and two assists with Bourgeault a close second with two and one.

There was more action in the first five minutes of the game than in the average period. But the attacks were evenly divided until F. Cook combined with Boucher and the latter scored on the rebound of Cook's shot. Hainsworth had more than his share of work for the balance of the session, but survived. The Rangers bested him in the second session when W. Cook and Bourgeault each scored twice and Thompson combined with Quenneville in another. Boucher helped in both Cook goals but Bourgeault scored alone. Morenz to Lepine put the puck in once for Canadiens, but the goal was disallowed.

Patrick tried fancy combinations of his forwards at the start of the final session, also using Keeling on defense, but after Mondou and Morenz scored in rapid succession, he sent his regulars back, and first Boucher and then Keeling taking a pass from Bourgeault bounced the puck in off the stick of Morenz. Larochelle to Leduc accounted for the third Canadien goal and the game ended with a swarm of penalties, but no further scores. The summary:

N. Y. RANGERS		CANADIENS

CHICAGO—In one of the most thrilling hockey games ever seen here the Chicago Black Hawks came from behind to defeat the Montreal Maroons, 4 to 3, in the National Hockey League race at the Coliseum Thursday night. Outskating their heavier opponents, the Hawks aroused the 8000 crowd to excitement with rallies that brought two goals in the last two minutes.

Speed and a clever passing attack gave the locals a lead when they scored the only goal of the first period in 10 minutes. Couture counting on a pass from Somers. Up to this point the Hawks kept the play almost entirely in the rival goal zone. Thereafter penalties broke up their attack. Each side scored in the second period and the Hawks led, 2 to 1, as the final period opened.

Montreal got two well-earned but easily scored goals in the first 13 minutes of the third period. Smith on a pass from Boucher and Stewart on a pass from Dutton. Then the visitors went on the defensive and the Hawks for a time could not get past mid-Ice. With two minutes left to play the Hawks assaulted in a body and Cook tied the score from a faceoff in front of the goal. Only a minute later Miller took a pass from Cook to register the winning goal. The summary:

CHICAGO		MONTREAL

Male Officials Are Barred at I. W. A. C.

Women in Charge of Swimming Meet for Experience —May Continue

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

CHICAGO—Looking toward the time when women's athletic events will be in charge of women officials, the Illinois Women's Athletic Club is holding a swimming meet here tonight in which male officials are to be barred. The middle states swimming championships will be decided at this meet.

Lillian W. Reilly, I. W. A. C. swimming coach, says there is no reason why women can't be efficient officials if given the opportunity to gain experience, and this meet is designed to give some of that necessary experience.

At the present time there are two points to be considered in regard to competitive athletics for women. At the last meeting of the national section of women's athletics of the American Physical Education Association this group, representing a large number of trained women in the field of physical education, went on record as being opposed to girls and women entering the Olympic Games. The Amateur Athletic Union controls and sponsors competitive athletics for women. Fred L. Steers, chairman of the committee on women's athletics, A. A. U., takes the stand that the criticism directed against competitive sports for women is without foundation.

Mrs. Reilly, who has rapidly come to the front as the country's leading woman swimming coach, has some interesting ideas on the subject, and favors a middle course. Believing that there is a place in the general development plan of girls for competitive athletics, she advocates intelligent, unprejudiced study of the present program with a view to altering it to fit their needs. She cites the fact that the present program does not represent the thought of trained workers in the field, but is merely part of the men's program which had been found adaptable to a women's program.

She believes that the Amateur Union is deserving of a great deal of credit for having considered the movement when there was no other organization to do it, and that they have accomplished much in putting the movement on a firm footing. However, she says the men of the A. A. U. have done their part and that women who are interested in the physical development of the girls and women of America, should assume their responsibility and offer their services to the A. A. U., expressing willingness to serve on the women's committees of that organization. She feels certain that the officials of the Amateur Athletic Union would welcome their assistance.

In looking over the list of officials selected to serve at the meet, it is noted that all of the ladies have an athletic background. Caroline S. Chapman, Ethel Lackie and Ethelda B. McWalters are former Olympic champions. Emily Daves is a former member of the I. W. A. C. tank squad. Elsie Shreiber is one of the leading authorities on basketball in the middle West and also knows swimming. Elizabeth Waterman is the I. W. A. C. track coach. Cathryn Connor, Marie O'Leary and Margaret Hayes are members of the physical education department in the Chicago schools; Edna Guldstrand is the women's swimming instructor at the Medinah Athletic Club; Alice McGrail is swimming instructor at Rosary College. Mrs. Richard S. Folsom, the referee, is chairman of the athletic committee of the I. W. A. C., and Mrs. Zelda Rohde and Mrs. Charles Drake have been identified with I. W. A. C. athletic committees since the formation of the club. Mrs. Reilly will act as starter.

BOWMAN REPLACES HARMON

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

CHICAGO—In an effort to secure more business shows and conventions for the Chicago Stadium, John F. Bowman has been appointed manager, in place of P. T. Harmon, who recently retired by request. Bowman takes over the duties temporarily assumed by Sheldon Clark, new president of the $7,000,000 arena corporation. Bowman was for years secretary of the convention bureau of the Chicago Association of Commerce, a former newspaper advertising man, and now director of conventions and exhibitions at the Stevens Hotel. It was felt by the directors of the Stadium, that Harmon allowed it to stand idle too much by making little effort to get any events other than sporting affairs. President Clark announces that Bowman will take up his new duties the first of the year.

HAMILTON DEFEATS NIAGARA

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont.—The Niagara Falls Cataracts lost their ninth game in 10 starts in the International Hockey League game here on Thursday when they were defeated by the seventh-place Hamilton Tigers, 3 to 1. The locals scored in the first period and Hamilton once in the second and twice in the third. It was the Tigers' second win of the season.

N. C. A. A. TO MEET ON DECEMBER 31

To Discuss Existing Conditions in College Athletics

NEW YORK (AP)—Now that the Carnegie Foundation in its sensational "Bulletin 23" has pointed out the wrongs existing in American college athletics, the National Collegiate Athletic Association is going to try to do something about it all.

Issuing the official call to the 24th annual conference of the N. C. A. A. beginning here Dec. 31, President Palmer E. Pierce on Thursday informed members that the council of the association will give careful consideration to the question of "what can be done to correct the abuses and excesses in collegiate athletics established by this investigation."

"The council," he announced further, "will probably present to the delegates at the general conference, recommendations concerning the action considered desirable.

"In view of the importance of this discussion, college presidents are especially urged to attend and take part in it."

It was largely at the instance of the N. C. A. A. that the Carnegie Foundation survey was made.

STANFORD AND I. C. A. A. A. MAY SEPARATE

Association Would Award Two Titles in Meet

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif. (AP)—A split between Stanford University and the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletics of America loomed here today, when the text of a reply by Stanford Athletic officials to a questionnaire of eastern I. C. A. A. A. A. officials wes revealed.

The questionnaire was in the form of a vote on a proposition that two titles be awarded in the annual I. C. A. A. A. A. meet, one for track and another for field, or that fewer points be awarded victors in field events than track winners.

Stanford athletic heads said they took this to mean that the East is trying to legislate the West out of a chance to win the meet. Teams from the Pacific coast—Stanford University of California and the University of Southern California—have won the meet eight times in the last nine years on points scored mainly in field events.

The reply sent by Stanford athletic officials in part said, "The I. C. A. A. A. A. does not need to spoil its championship meet in order to get rid of us. If the I. C. A. A. A. A. does not want us as members, we would be glad to resign."

NEW YORK (AP)—Stanford University officials appear to have misinterpreted the questionnaire sent them and other member institutions of the I. C. A. A. A. A., it was said at the offices of the association today. The move represented a "mere inquiry" and any important change in the conduct of the championship meet is virtually impossible, James A. Taylor, assistant to the president, explained.

"On the proposal that points be awarded differently for track and for field events, about 20 replies have been received," Mr. Taylor said, "and almost all are against it. There is not the slightest chance that this suggestion will be adopted. It represented the proposal of only one individual, and it is unfortunate that it ever went out."

Sentiment also is decidedly against the idea of awarding a track title and a field title, instead of the present track and field championship, he said. Some possibility is seen, however, that members will decide to award a cup for track and a cup for field supremacy, as well as the track and field trophy.

"This would simply give the coast another cup," Mr. Taylor remarked.

LAYTON IS LEADING, 400 TO 341

NEW YORK—John Layton, world's champion, won two blocks of his three-cushion billiard match with Welker Cochran at Dwyer's Broadway rooms Thursday, to lead the match to date, 400 to 341. He took the first block, 50 to 41, in 50 innings, and the second, 50 to 47, in 55 innings. High runs were Layton, 4 and 6; Cochran 5 and 6.

TEMPLE SOCCER TEAM ELECTS

PHILADELPHIA—Hyman Shore, veteran left fullback, was elected captain of the Temple University soccer team at a meeting Thursday of the lettermen. He succeeds Peter Leaness and Benjamin Davidson, who held the captaincy jointly last season.

WOODFIN ELECTED AT BANQUET

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

HOUSTON, Tex.—Mustering a brand of backfield strength that has been the chief characteristic of All-Southwest Intercollegiate Conference football teams for the past half decade, the 1929 all-honor team for this college league claims one of the best balanced and most versatile lineups available in many seasons.

Whereas it appeared a month ago that the selection of an all-star team in the Southwest would involve a resort to blindfold tactics, today the list of first-team players has been naturally and definitely established as the logical roster to represent the Conference at its mythical best.

Only One Exception

By a process of elimination that has been certain and effective, the first eleven stands out as an auto-selective combination that could rout the best college team the Conference has ever claimed. Each member of this year's honor team has made sure his position by outplaying every other contender for the position. With only one exception, every man is stationed at the position to which he was assigned throughout the season.

Five of the seven members of the Conference have gained representation this year, with the championship Texas Christian University furnishing a majority of four, two in the line and two in the backfield. Three other colleges, the University of Texas, Baylor University and Southern Methodist University, have won two positions each, and the fifth member, Arkansas, has one man on the squad. Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College and Rice Institute failed to gain recognition.

Four of the players are selected for the second consecutive year. They are Wear K. Schoonover '30 of Arkansas; B. J. Koch '31 and Jake Wilson '31 of Baylor, and H. J. Sanders '30 of S. M. U. Four members of the 1929 honor team are seniors; the remaining seven are juniors.

Grubbs at Quarterback

The all-Conference line, including two players who have received favorable and general all-America mention, has speed and agility as well as stonewall resistance; the backfield, embracing the fastest quartet of ball carriers that the Conference has yet claimed, appears flawless. The excellence of the Southwest's backfield this year makes the chosen four the more meritorious, for this means that the backfield combination had to eclipse opposition that was generally keener.

Howard W. Grubbs '30, T. C. U. quarterback, was easily the cleverest field general in the league, but his qualifications did not cease there, for his forward passing was largely responsible for the success of the Horned Frogs, who won their first Conference championship since their entry in the circuit in 1922.

The halves, Wilson and C. J. Leland '31 of T. C. U., afford the all-star team a dangerous and powerful scoring threat. The former was the leading scorer for the year in the Southwest, and the latter was the backbone of the T. C. U. scoring machine, his brilliant broken field running, ranging from 93 to 45 yards in virtually every game, stamping him as the premier running back this season. The fullback, Dexter Shelley '31, Texas U., was a line-smashing, hard-running back, whose additional claim to a place was his blocking, interfering and stanch secondary defensive play behind the line.

There were other great backs this season, including Weldon Mason '32, S. M. U. halfback, who received much favorable mention; Thomas E. Mills '30 Texas A. and M. quarterback; Richard A. Miller '31, Arkansas halfback; Harlos Green '32, T. C. U. fullback; F. A. Rees '30, Texas quarterback; Ralph Jones '32, Rice Institute halfback, and R. E. Gilbert '32, S. M. U quarterback.

The all-Conference line presents a picture of offensive and defensive strength founded upon smart football and the ability to put this conception into action. Schoonover of Arkansas and Marion Hammon '31, S. M. U. tackle, have received wide mention as all-America timber, and deservedly, for these two factors comprised the best that both teams had to offer.

Defensive Tackle

Alfred Rose '30, Texas end, and Schoonover's running mate on the honor team, is an excellent pass receiver and a fine defensive end. The placing of Lester Erumbelow '31, T. C. U. captain, at tackle pulls the burly Horned Frog guard out of his offensive position, but Brumbelow played defensive tackle all year, and his teaming with Hammon provides a pair of tackles not to be outplayed.

The choices of Koch of Baylor and Saunders of S. M. U. at guard merits no more than passing consideration for the reason that both improved upon their 1928 play, and that was good enough to gain them unanimous selection last year. Noble Atkins '31, T. C. U. center, was the most accurate snap-back passer in the Conference, and his defensive play was superior to that of his two chief rivals, Louis Paradeaux '31, Baylor, and M. C. Burnett '30, Texas. A roving center on defense, Atkins was at his best against a forward passing attack.

There were other excellent linemen in the Conference this year, including Weldon Lucas '31, Baylor, Adrian Tracy '31, Texas Aggies, and J. E. Long '31, S. M. U. ends; Gordon Brown '30, Texas, Charles A. Morris '31, Baylor, and Robert T. Moore '31, T. C. U., tackles; Curtis Beaty '30, Texas, S. L. Witcher '31, Baylor, and Bush Jones '30, Rice, guards; and Furnett and Paradeaux at center.

WISCONSIN IS HANDICAPPED

Lacks Tall Center Material for Basketball Team— May Use Forward

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

MADISON, Wis.—"University of Wisconsin's basketball squad is an outstandingly sophomore aggregation. The men are fast, clever, will handle the ball cleanly, and we should finish well up in the first division of the Intercollegiate Conference, but lack of stars will mitigate our chances for another title."

That is Coach W. E. Meanwell's view of the season's prospects for the Badgers in "Big Nine" competition. He does not hesitate to characterize his pupils as the best group of second year men he ever tutored, but he considers the lack of tall men for "tipoff" plays a handicap of at least eight points in every championship contest.

Of the 19 men comprising Coach Meanwell's regular squad only four have had previous college experience. The others are all sophomores and of the entire group only T. E. Foster '30, and R. A. Fries '32, exceed six feet in height.

Foster Is 6ft. 2in.

Foster probably will be used to jump at center, then will move up to a forward position, where he has shown to the best advantage in past seasons. He is the only player remaining among four tall men on last year's team. E. F. Tenhopen, H. C. Kowalczyk and R. F. Ellerman all having graduated. Foster joined the squad late this fall, adding material strength, following the removal of early doubts of his availability. He stands 6ft. 2in. in height and has an accurate eye for close in and medium distance shots.

With E. A. Chmielewski '31 and C. H. Matthusen '30, guard and forward, respectively on the 1928-29 team, he forms the nucleus of this year's five, the fourth veteran being another forward, M. N. Farber '31, who has shown no little effectiveness in closeup shots which characterize the Meanwell short-pass type of play.

Outstanding among the new men is Douglas Nelson '32, a rugged and fast player just under six feet in height, who has been quick to master the style taught by the Badger coach, handles the ball well and whose shots find the basket consistently. He is aggressive and already is assured of a regular position at center or forward. A classmate, H. N. Griswold '32, has shown greatest promise as Nelson's alternate, and he too measures just under six feet.

Fast Running Guard

Chmielewski, a fast running guard whose dribbling won him "all-conference" honors last year, is certain to play one of the defense positions and competition is keen for the place opposite him. In early scrimmages J. A. Paul '32 and J. F. Poser '32 have alternated at the post, closely pressed by Fries.

Fries, who is one of the biggest candidates on the squad, is one of two students who came to Wisconsin from Bowling Green, O. And both he and M. H. Steen '32, a small but sturdy forward with ability to score field goals, have attracted attention of the coaching staff.

Addition of three men from the football squad has further intensified the competition for places, and while all three are sophomores they promise further reserve strength for the team. N. A. Pacetti '32 and R. A. Rebholz '32 are guards, the latter of whom already has shown flashes of speed as a dribbler, while H. C. Jensen '32 is a capable forward.

And even these men do not exhaust the supply of forwards and guards, for E. J. Knechtges '32, D. B. Brault '32, J. D. Steinmetz '32 and L. G. Zoelle '32 all have shown promise in the one classification, while H. G. Michler '32 and R. W. Tornowski '32 have earned consideration as defense players.

University of Iowa's suspension from the "Big Ten" has reduced Wisconsin's Conference schedule from 12 to 10 games. The dates follow:

Jan. 4—Northwestern University at Evanston; 11—Ohio State University at Columbus; 18—University of Illinois at Madison 20—University of Chicago at Madison; 23—University of Indiana at Bloomington.

Feb. 15—Northwestern University at Madison 24—University of Illinois at Urbana.

March 3—Ohio State University at Madison; 7—University of Indiana at Madison.

School Children to See Baseball Free

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago

CHICAGO school children who lack the price of admission to see the Cubs and White Sox play baseball will not have to search for peek holes next season.

They will be admitted free to three games a week, Pres. William L. Veeck of the Cubs and Secretary Harry M. Grabiner of the White Sox announced Thursday. A charge of 25 cents will be made for other games, except those played on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Veeck and Grabiner announced the free admissions following the suggestion of Commissioner of Baseball Judge K. M. Landis to charge a smaller fee for school children, so they would become interested in the game.

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

DETROIT, Mich.—It remained for Marcel Camp, Detroit boy, to be the first player, engaging in his first world pocket billiard championship tournament to defeat both Frank I. Taberski, defending champion, and E. Ralph Greenleaf, a former champion, in the same tournament. This was made possible when Camp did the unexpected for the second time this week by defeating Greenleaf in the Recreation Building Thursday night by 125 to 113 in 23 innings.

Greenleaf played brilliantly and for a time it looked as though Camp would be crushed. Greenleaf was leading at 40 to 0 in the third inning when he was stopped by a scratch. From this point on Camp began to pick up, and, giving an exhibition of daring and courage, he went into the lead in the fourteenth inning after Greenleaf lost 15 points by having three scratches in a row. Camp now is in a tie with Taberski for second place. Erwin Rudolph leads with two victories and no defeats. The score by innings:

Marcel Camp—s s s 13 1s s 20 s 4s 29x x s 9 x x x x 19x 0 2s 0 x 27x 2 s 0—113. High run—29. Scratches—6. Safeties—10.

Spencer Livsey of Los Angeles, scored his first victory in the tournament in three starts when he defeated Pasquale Natalie of Detroit in the first game on the afternoon program by 125 to 96 in 31 innings. Livsey's high run was 29 and Natalie's 24. It was Natalie's first setback. The score by innings:

In the second game in the afternoon Taberski defeated Joseph J. McCann of Jacksonville, Fla., by the score of 125 to 31 in 12 innings. His high run was 50 and McCann's 14. McCann was penalized 15 points for making three scratches in a row. The score by innings:

F. I. Taberski—s 1 17x x 9 14 0 28x s s 50 9—125. Innings—12. Scratches—3. Safeties—3.

Holiday Fruit Cup

Remove the grapefruit pulp in half-sections, allowing one grapefruit to four persons. For each grapefruit allow the pulp from an orange, one-half of a banana cut in tiny cubes, and 2 tablespoonfuls of sugar. Chill, and at serving time turn into small stem glasses, add 1 tablespoonful of white grape juice, or the liquid from maraschino cherries, and garnish each portion with a red and green half-cherry.

Roast Goose

This should be a gosling not over a year old. Singe, and before drawing, scrub it well with hot soapsuds and a soft scrubbing brush; nothing less will cleanse the oily skin. Rinse with clear water, dry and draw. Wash inside with clear water to which one teaspoonful of baking soda has been added, rinse with cold water, dry, sprinkle well with salt and pepper, and stuff. Remove excess fat before trussing as such fat gives a rank flavor. Lay the goose on its back and place thin slices of fat salt pork on the breast. This makes basting during the first hour unnecessary. At the end of that time, remove from the oven, pour off all fat in the pan and remove the pork. Dredge with flour and put back into the oven. When the flour is browned, pour boiling water into the pan to cover the bottom and baste frequently until the goose is nicely browned and is tender at the joints. This will take two or three hours.

Onion Stuffing

Chop parsley to make ½ cupful, then 2 medium-sized onions. Add 2½ quarts of stale bread crumbs, ½ cupful melted butter, 2½ teaspoonfuls of salt and, if liked, 1 tablespoonful of poultry seasoning. Beat 2 eggs and stir in lightly with a fork. Moisten slightly with boiling water, though this dressing must be dry rather than wet.

Baked Apple Baskets

Cut in halves lengthwise enough apples to allow one-half to each person, with a few pieces to spare. Core each and scoop out the inside to form a shell. Fill with hot apple sauce made by cooking 8 apples with 1 cupful of fruit juice or melted cranberry or currant jelly, 2 slices of lemon, a dash each of salt and cinnamon and 1 tablespoonful of butter. Remove the lemon and force the sauce through a sieve, then sweeten if liked. Bake the baskets until they are heated through but do not break. A pancake turner is useful in transferring them to the platter when they are done.

Pomegranate Ice

Soak 4 teaspoonfuls of gelatine in ¼ cupful of water. Boil together for five minutes 1 cupful of sugar and 1¾ cupfuls of water, then pour over the gelatine and stir until all particles are dissolved. Chill, then add ¼ cupful of lemon juice and 2 cupfuls of juice from red oranges. If these are unavailable, a little red vegetable coloring will give the desired tint to orange juice. Strain, add the grated rind of an orange and freeze, using 2 measures of ice to 1 of salt.

With electric refrigeration, pour the mixture into the freezing tray and leave until it is partially frozen. Turn from the refrigerator pan to a large mixing bowl that has been chilled in the refrigerator, and beat vigorously with a rotary egg beater. Return to the refrigerator pan, place again in the chilling unit and leave. In two or 2½ hours, the mixture may be beaten a second time, returned to the pan and left there until needed.

Sweet Potatoes With Marshmallows

Allow a medium-sized sweet potato to each person, choosing tubers rich yellow in color. Boil until tender, mash, and season to taste with salt, butter and cream. Beat until fluffy and turn into a buttered casserole. Smooth the top, then place marshmallows about ½ an inch apart and bake until they are melted.

Scalloped Potatoes

Peel raw potatoes and slice them into a buttered baking dish, alternating the layers with a liberal sprinkling of salt and pepper and bread crumbs dotted generously with butter. With crumbs and butter on top, pour in just enough hot milk to be seen, and bake until the potatoes are done and the top golden-brown.

Buttered Turnips in Beet Cups

Cut turnips into dice and cook until tender in slightly salted water, then drain. Boil beets until tender, then drain and save the liquor, if the dish is not to be served immediately; strain the juice and reheat the beets in it later. Scoop out the insides of the beets to form cups, fill with the turnip cubes, sprinkle with salt and paprika and pour hot melted butter over all.

Green Salad

Soak 1 tablespoonful of gelatine in ½ cupful of water for five minutes. Dissolve in 1 cupful of boiling water, then add ½ cupful of sugar, ¼ cupful of vinegar and a pinch of salt. Tint with green vegetable coloring and leave until partly set before beating in: sweet cucumber pickles and stuffed olives, each sliced thin to make ½ cupful, the same amount of sliced canned pineapple well drained and chopped, and ½ cupful of chopped blanched almonds. Chill in six individual molds. Serve unmolded on lettuce hearts, with mayonnaise diluted with whipped cream on top, and garnish with halves of red and green cherries.

Golden Fruit Cake

(This recipe was published last Friday)

Ginger Cordial

Simmer together ½ pound of figs, a pinch of ginger, ½ teaspoonful each of allspice, cinnamon, mace and ground cloves, and cold water to cover. When the figs are tender, remove from the fire and press through a sieve into a clean saucepan. To the sirup add 3 pints of ginger ale, heat slowly until it boils, then add a scant teaspoonful of cornstarch mixed to a thin paste with cold water, and bring to a boil again, stirring constantly. Flavor to taste with lemon juice. Serve in small cups and garnish with a sprinkling of chopped candied orange peel.

To Save Time

Two days before Christmas the salad may be made, the goose made ready for stuffing, sirups made for the gingerade and for the ice, apple sauce for the baskets, and celery, radishes and assorted fruits prepared. Keep all in a cool place until needed.

The day before Christmas get the goose ready and put it in a cold place. Order ice cream and rolls. Cook turnips and make beet cups.

Early on Christmas morning put the ice mixtures in the freezing unit if electric refrigeration is available; otherwise, leave the freezing until two hours before serving time. Put fruits together for the fruit cup and leave to chill. Start the goose roasting. Prepare both kinds of potatoes and the celery for garnishing the meat. Set the table. Finish the ginger cordial, reheat turnips and beets, keeping all hot on top of the oven until needed. Reheat the apple sauce and bake the apple baskets. When the meat is done, turn off the fire and place the bag of rolls in the oven, the opening of the bag twisted to keep in the moisture.

Novelties Here and There

TO CHOOSE just the acceptable and appropriate gift for some good friend has at times puzzled even the best of us. What does the friend need? Or what would fit in with what the friend already has?

A visit to the gift show in Chicago where dealers were making their purchases for their shops for the winter season indicated to the writer some new ideas and some interesting variations of old ones.

Traveling at Home

How about a world globe as a gift? With transatlantic flights and around-the-world cruises replacing the former jaunts to a neighboring state, we need to refresh our knowledge of geography a bit, or perhaps even school ourselves anew in the whereabouts of cities and countries on the other side of our sphere. Hence attention is being turned to the world globe and many a home will consider it as much of a necessity as the dictionary.

These globes may be purchased in different sizes. One company offers a globe which not only carries the map of the entire world on its outer surface but which when taken apart in sections or layers displays on the top of each layer the map of a single continent. The continents are formed of detachable pieces representing the smaller nations or states, which must be fitted together to complete the whole.

Children at home and in some schools where this globe is used enjoy fitting these pieces together in their proper places and to see coming out of their efforts South America, Africa or Australia. Thus the younger children regard the globe as a toy and the older ones, including the parents, as an educator.

New Ideas

Plaques are apparently becoming more popular as gifts. Mellow-toned French prints outlined in dull antiqued frames filled one whole section of an exhibit. A hard composition formed the base of the plaque, while Beethoven, characters from Dickens, historic scenes and literary topics were some of the subjects.

The old-fashioned pin-cushion and tray are bowing to the oncoming miniature chest of drawers or dresser cabinets to be used on top of the dresser as both a useful and decorative object. In these tiniest of doll drawers may be kept the various pins, collar buttons and even jewelry. The boxes are made of heavy pasteboard and covered with a decorative paper which comes in different colors to blend with the bedroom color scheme.

For those using fireplaces, a present of cone kindlers makes a nice gift. The cones come in a small cloth sack. They are chemically treated, and when placed in the fire give a many-colored flame which adds zest to the winter evening or added charm to the summer beach fire.

A metal desk basket or flower container is generally a safe selection, for it can be used in several ways. It stands about one foot high, with an opening at the top of approximately six inches in diameter, and can be used as a scrap basket or, being waterproof, it takes long-stemmed bouquets. It may also serve as a porch vase for large summer flowers.

Home Touches

The home woman might be pleased wtih a little gayly decorated pot of planted parsley, which if kept on her window sill guarantees garnish for her winter meats. She would also like the new colored crystal sugar used in table decorations. For instance, yellow jonquils as a center piece with yellow-tinted place cards would be supplemented with a sprinkling of yellow flaky crystal sugar on the whipped cream of the dessert. The sugar comes in yellow, green, blue, orchid and pink. Lump sugar also is being put on the market in different colors.

An ensemble present consisting of pillow, foot stool, magazine basket and rug all made of the same felt material and decorated in the same little bright-colored felt flowers makes a good gift for the family.

Owls whose radium eyes shine more brightly the darker the corner in which the birds are perched, make an odd ornament. A small hat rack representing a long-stemmed flower painted in natural colors to take the stray hat before it finds its home in the box or shelf is a convenient addition for the dresser or table.

Children, too, were given attention at the gift show. Toys of all descriptions included small transparent cakes of soap, each bar containing in its center a picture or a little tin animal toy. In his effort to reach the toy, the child will wash his hands many times.

[These novelties cannot be definitely located by the editor, but have a wide distribution in gift departments.]

A Fudge Secret

This is a fudge recipe apparently infallible, resulting in the delicious, creamy candy which is the despair of those who can make only the hard, grainy kind. The recipe itself is an ordinary one.

Two cupfuls of granulated sugar, mixed thoroughly with as much cocoa as one likes, usually two tablespoonfuls. One cupful of milk added and the mixture slowly boiled, until when tested in cold water, it forms a soft ball. A piece of butter the size of a walnut and vanilla.

The secret is in not beating or stirring the ingredients until the fudge has cooled. The cooling is done by placing the pan in a pan of cold water, which is changed as soon as it becomes warm. No stirring is done until the finger can be thrust into the center of the candy without being burned. At this moment it should be beaten until it thickens enough to pour easily but not to flatten. It is then ready to turn out on a buttered plate and will make approximately a pound of soft, creamy candy.

'Potatoes, Prunes and Prisms'

ACCORDING to table etiquette, potatoes are classed among the "knifeless" foods. Even the plain boiled potato should be cut with the side of the fork or separated with the tines into suitable bits. When necessary to put butter on a potato, this should also be done with one's fork and never with the knife. When eating a baked potato, etiquette approves removing only a mouthful at a time leaving the potato shell intact except at the point where it is opened. Breaking the potato in two and laboriously emptying each half is not looked upon as good table manners. It is a much more graceful procedure to eat it daintily from its crisp shell, and, to further correct table manners, a baked potato is usually served with a cross cut on one side, the corners of the skin raised slightly and a piece of butter inserted.

Stewed prunes are among the commonplace foods that are sometimes difficult to eat gracefully. The well appointed table now provides both spoon and fork for such a dish, or the "double silver service" as it is sometimes called, the fork being of the dessert size. The spoon is held in the right hand so that one cuts the pulp away from the pit, using the side of the spoon. The fruit is held in place with the fork in the left hand. By this method the pits are not taken into the mouth and the embarrassment of removing them is avoided. A sharp-edged orange spoon can be used for this service, if a dessert fork is not available.

Holiday Table Trimmings

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

London

THE decoration of the table is always somewhat of a problem at Christmas time, and the many last minute preparations so encroach upon thought and time that the evolving of an effective and economical scheme is often left until the eleventh hour, and many a woman is thereby rushed into unnecessarily expensive purchases.

The following scheme of table decoration, however, is not only simple and economical but is also charmingly attractive.

The center piece consists of a jade-green glass bowl filled with the glistening silvery seed pods of honesty (Lunaria biennis), also called satin flower and moonwort. This is delightful on a polished table. A touch of bright color, always welcome at this time of year, should be introduced by the inexpensive dried Solanum fruits. Three of these, vividly orange-scarlet in color, and similar to small tomatoes in appearance, should be placed at regular intervals, connected by a trail of single holly leaves, around the glass bowl, and triangle-wise at each corner of the table. Green and scarlet crackers, and tall and short candle in the same colors complete this inexpensive but effective scheme of decoration.

Many people might smile at the idea of oranges being utilized to decorate a dinner-table, but a charming scheme was recently hastily improvised by using this colorful fruit together with sprays of arbor vitæ cut from the garden. This evergreen was arranged down the center of the table, and at each corner, and the oranges were arranged as naturally as possible amidst the leaves.

Orange crackers gave an additional touch of color to this particular table, but if color contrast is preferred a few blue or purple crackers could be introduced with quite a happy effect.

A delightful table center for a children's Christmas party is easily made by filling a large flat pan or shallow bowl with earth which when fairly dry is sprinkled with artificial frost. Various-sized sprays of holly berries are then arranged as artistically as possible, and imbedded in the earth, and if several miniature figures of birds are placed among these tiny holly trees the result is a little decoration which will delight the small folk.

Does your hair tend to be dry?
Here is a special shampoo for dry hair—Packer's Olive Oil Shampoo. Like all Packer soaps, this shampoo is a vegetable oil soap. It cleanses thoroughly but gently . . . leaves your hair soft and silky, more easily manageable.
For oily hair, use Packer's Pine Tar Shampoo. Its clouds of snowy lather clean so quickly, completely and leave your hair fluffy, with a natural sparkle.
Both these shampoos are made with the same skill and care that have made Packer's Tar Soap famous for shampooing for 60 years.
At drug and department stores.
Sample, 10¢
Please state whether you wish the olive oil, the pine tar, or the tar soap.

Among the Railroads

EXTRA fares charged on certain limited trains are to be thoroughly investigated by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has sent a questionnaire to the railroads and scheduled a hearing at Chicago, Feb. 17. Among the questions asked the railroads are, "In what manner does the service rendered on extra fare trains differ from that on trains on which no extra fare is charged," and "upon what basis are extra fares arrived at?"

Other queries deal with additional revenues earned from such fares, added costs of operation, length of time such fares have been assessed and other data. The alleged illegality in the charge is based upon the fact that the fares are higher for long-distance runs than the sum of the intermediate fares between such points.

The railroads which operate extra fare trains are relatively few in number. The New York Central and Pennsylvania have a number of such trains between New York and Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland, Detroit and Cincinnati, and the Baltimore & Ohio and the Erie have two and one extra-fare trains, respectively, between New York and Chicago.

The New Haven's Merchants and Knickerbocker Limited assess an extra fare of $1.20 and on the Senator the extra fare from Boston to New York is $1.50 and $2.50 from Boston to Washington. The Pennsylvania also operates its New York-Washington Congressional Limited on a $1.50 extra-fare basis. The Crescent Limited, from New York to New Orleans; the Panama Limited of the Illinois Central, from Chicago to New Orleans; the Chief of the Santa Fe, Chicago to Los Angeles, and the Overland Limited, Chicago to San Francisco, by the Northwestern-Union Pacific-Southern Pacific; the Cascade of the Southern Pacific, Portland-San Francisco; and one or two Boston & Albany and Michigan Central trains complete the list of extra-fare trains.

New C. N. R. Hotel

A new hotel will be erected by the Canadian National Railways at Saskatoon, Sask., to supplement the string of hostelries now operated by the railroad at various points along its line. The $2,000,000 edifice will be modeled along the lines of the Château Laurier, at Ottawa, one of the railroad's hotels. In addition to those now in operation at Ottwa, Winnipeg, Brandon and Edmonton, together with the summer resorts, such as Pictou, N. S., Minaki Lodge, Ont., and Jasper Park Lodge, Alta., the Canadian National is erecting hotels at Halifax, N. S., Charlottetown, P. E. I., and Vancouver, B. C., and officials of the company admit that it may eventually be necessary to provide some type of accommodations for the large number of tourists who have expressed a desire to visit Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, with the completion of the railroad to that far-northern outpost.

Rail Magazine Reissued

The Railroad Man's Magazine, formerly published by the Frank A. Munsey Company, has been revived and is being issued under the same title. The magazine attained remarkable popularity a number of years ago, when it was suddenly suspended by Mr. Munsey. The new magazine is edited along the same general lines as the former, with several special departments. It is edited by William E. Hayes.

Foreign Cars Increase

The New Haven Railroad's reports for September, 1929 and 1928, show a substantial increase in the proportion of "foreign" to home freight cars on line. For the current year, it showed approximately 18,000 foreign to 13,800 home cars, against 17,400 foreign and 16,143 home cars in September, 1928.

Land Cruises

A more extended "land cruise" schedule has been prepared by Raymond & Whitcomb Company for the coming winter, with detours into Mexico, from San Antonio, for passengers desiring to go below the Rio Grande.

The first "cruise" in the specially assembled equipment with recreation car and other unique facilities in the train, leaves New York Jan. 16, followed by others on Jan. 25, Feb. 6 and 20. The Mexico trips leave San Antonio, Tex., on Jan. 29, Feb. 11 and 24, connecting with the trains from New York. The route is southward over the Pennsylvania-Southern Railway-West Point route-Louisville & Nashville to Biloxi and New Orleans, in each instance and on to San Antonio by Southern Pacific. The Mexican tours from that point include visits to Mexico City, Chapultepec, Guadalupe, Monterrey and other points of interest, and return to San Antonio.

Picking up the regular route of the "land cruises," the passengers on the Mexican detours proceed to El Paso, through Apache Trail, Grand Canyon, spend varying periods in California and return east via Lake Tahoe, Salt Lake City and Denver. Extensions to Honolulu are also possible.

Newspapers on Trains

Copies of The Christian Science Monitor are carried in the Columbian, fast afternoon train of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad from Washington and New York, following the placing of papers on the same train southbound. The Columbian leaves Washington at 4 p. m., arriving New York (Jersey City Station) 8:28 p. m., with free motor coach transfer from trainside to various locations in New York and Brooklyn. Other Baltimore & Ohio trains, so equipped, include the Capitol Limited (Washington-Chicago) National Limited (Washington-St. Louis) Detroit Limited (Washington-Detroit) and Chicago-Special (Washington-Chicago) in each direction.

Of Interest to Travelers

A new fast afternoon train between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh each way, has been established by the Pennsylvania Railroad, leaving each terminal at 2:15 p. m. and making an eight-hour run.

The Manoir Richelieu, Canada Steamship Lines hotel at Murray Bay, Quebec, is to be opened for the winter season and through sleepers from New York will be operated in the Montrealer, on a 23-hour schedule

Daytona Beach

DAYTONA BEACH FLORIDA

IF you are planning a trip South this winter we hope it's a pleasant one. That the fish come your way, if you go fishing. That the balls find the cups, if it's golf. That the roads are smooth and that the motor doesn't "act up", if you drive through. That wherever you go, whatever you do, however you come, you have a royal good time.

Daytona Beach offers you more this season than ever before. The Boardwalk is being tripled in length, New beauties (bathing and scenic!) are added to the Beach and the Riverfront Park. A new Airport accommodates the air-minded. Better golf, fishing, tennis and motoring than ever. More people coming too. The sort you'll like to "recreate" with. Rents are reasonable. JACKSONVILLE

THE NATURAL FOCUS OF A FLORIDA VISIT

Would you think of going to England without a visit to London . . . . to France without seeing Paris . . . . or to Italy without a visit to Rome?

OF course you wouldn't! Nor does any really experienced traveller come to Florida without a visit to Jacksonville, Florida's principal city and the Southeastern corner of the United States ▲ ▲ ▲ A visit to Jacksonville is not, naturally, a complete visit to Florida ▲ ▲ ▲ But no jaunt through Florida is complete without a stop in Jacksonville ▲ ▲ ▲ Climate? . . . . Jacksonville has it, a zestful climate, never hot, never cold ▲ ▲ ▲ Scenery? . . . . Jacksonville's backcountry is a vista of subtropical beauty ▲ ▲ ▲ Hotel accommodations? . . . . Whether palatial hostelry or snug and homey inn, you'll find it here ▲ ▲ ▲ Entertainment? . . . . Jacksonville offers year-round sports such as superb hunting, fishing, golf, tennis and boating; fine theatres, restaurants famed for Southern cooking ▲ ▲ ▲ Historical associations? . . . . Some of the most vivid dramas of the Colonial and Territorial times were enacted near Jacksonville ▲ ▲ ▲ Commerce and industry? . . . . Jacksonville is the dominant port city of the Southeast, powerful in trade and manufacture.

Now you see why your Florida itinerary must include Jacksonville . . . . or . . . . make your Florida headquarters in this Winter Eden.

All transportation routes from a vast territory converge in Jacksonville.

Not Merely a Hotel

The Hotel Sheraton, because of its unusual location in the exclusive Back Bay residential district, on the banks of the Charles River, away from noisy traffic yet convenient to the business and shopping centers, becomes more than a hotel—more than a charming and unique place to live—it becomes, in fact, a mode of living.

For winter occupancy there are now available a few choice suites, or, if you so desire, accommodations may be arranged either en suite or in single rooms, by the day or month.

Full hotel service, excellent cuisine, and a delightful club-like atmosphere.

STOCK MARKET CONTORTIONS ARE VIOLENT

Prices Highly Irregular in Active Trading—Bears Are Aggressive

COPYRIGHT 1929. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

NEW YORK—With a volume of not much over 4,000,000 shares the stock market gave an exhibition of teeter-totter which left spectators a bit dazed and speculators greatly confused over what to expect. Outside influences on prices were of not great moment.

The small rise in brokers' loans, the violent work of the Reserve Banks in putting new credit into the market, the prospect of paying the fourth quarterly income taxes on Monday and the week-end trade reviews were all difficult to trade as factors in the course of prices. Rather the market was a personal affair in which the bears scored heavily part of the time and in which the bulls regained lost ground at other times.

Stocks which were pressed downward the furthest were naturally the most rapid climbers. Public utility issues swung through the widest ranges, while Steel, American Can, General Electric and such specialties as Johns-Manville and Radio gave an unusual performance in the art of gyration.

Thin Market Evident

No active stock was consistently strong or continually week during the day. The rails were less affected by the selling than were the utilities and the industrials, but the carriers gave no convincing signs of going forward from these levels. All stocks had a very thin market.

The rebound of leading stocks in the first half hour was quite impressive, but it came about too rapidly for the ordinary ticker trader to reap much benefit. Opening prices were about on a level with previous closing quotations, but the bond ticker, within 10 minutes after the opening, began printing "floor" prices, showing gains ranging from 2 to 5 points or more above the prevailing ticker prices.

Samples of the early snapback were: Case, from 185 to 200; Steel, from 167½ to 174; Johns-Manville, from 121 to 133; Foreign Power, from 88 to 93½; Westinghouse, from 133½ to above 140; Radio, from 39½ to above 43. American Can, from 114 to 121. Other stocks to run up 5 points or so were Telephone, International Telephone and General Electric.

Fox Film was again the favorite selling target, and it dropped to around 34 before finding support, which was partly short covering. The stock sold above 105 this year, and it thereby joins International Combustion as one of the leading exponents of stock market deflation.

The afternoon was given over to a succession of upturns and declines, with the tone tending to improve and the volume decreasing on the dips. Bonds were only moderately active and fairly firm. Wheat and cotton were narrow and without feature.

Call money held at 4½ per cent throughout and was fairly firm there. No other money rates were changed.

Foreign exchange markets were weak on the large gold shipments and the narrowing of the spread between the discount rates at the bank of England and the New York Federal Reserve Bank. Sterling was below the theoretical gold shipment point and French currency declined.

Gold Reserves Contract

This week's statement of the Federal Reserve Banks shows a sharp contraction in gold reserves, the reflection of the heavy gold exports. Gold reserves were down $28,000,000.

The Central Banks, however, put credit into the market to the extent of an increase of $5,000,000 in bill holdings and $31,000,000 in government security holdings. This credit and about $7,000,000 besides was used by the member banks in paying off their borrowings, which declined $103,000,000, now standing $260,000,000 below a year ago.

Circulation has not yet felt the effects of the holiday demand for currency, or at least such expansion has been offset by contraction elsewhere. Meanwhile the reserve ratio was up only slightly at 71.6 per cent, as compared with 64.2 per cent a year ago.

All the decrease in member bank borrowings took place at out-of-town banks, the New York institutions actually increasing their discounts.

Some people supposed that, because of the rapid decline in loans for "others" in the call market reported in November, the bulk of such loans by this time ought to be in the hands of banks, especially in view of the prevailing low interest rates. However, corporation and other lenders besides the banks still have nearly $1,909,000,000 out on call. That total is $428,000,000 lower than at this time last year.

On the other hand the local and out-of-town banks are lending $1,323,000,000 less than last year. While bank loans in the call market have dropped 46 per cent, loans for "others" have fallen off only 18 per cent. In other words, the banks have not had to take up the loan burden, dropped by corporations.

Gold Movement Heavy

News that the National City Bank is shipping $10,000,000 in gold to London brings the total $2,500,000 higher than had been anticipated, since that institution had been credited with only $7,500,000. In addition to that shipment and the $11,000,000 to be sent to London by the Irving Trust Company, the weekly statement of the Reserve Bank shows a total export of $10,977,000, plus an increase of $6,002,000 in earmarking, making a week's outflow of approximately $37,000,000.

That exceeds any monthly efflux reported in more than a year. On the basis of the ordinary calculations of $1 in gold supporting $13 in credit, potential lending power of the banks was decreased by $481,000,000. Whether the immediate position of bank lending power will be crippled to that extent will depend, of course, on what action the Federal Reserve Banks take. They are able, as happened in 1927-28 to offset the deflationary effect of gold shipments by their purchases of bills and government securities.

Fundamentals Are Sound

Week-end trade reviews are mildly optimistic. Retail trade is stimulated by Christmas shopping, but activity in the basic industries is declining. However, it is pointed out that December is usually a month of inventory taking and that this year manufacturers are particularly anxious to become as liquid as possible at the year end.

When everything is said that can be said in extenuation of the falling off in business activity, the fact remains that since midsummer a recession has been in progress, and that it is not yet possible to predict with confidence when it will end. However, the inventory situation is satisfactory and the commodity price structure and the credit position are too sound to admit of a prolonged depression.

UTILITY SHORT-TERM FINANCING

Short-term financing by Peoples Light & Power Corporation, a subsidiary of Tri-Utilities Corporation, consists of a new issue of $3,000,000 one-year 5½ per cent gold notes, dated Dec. 1, 1929, offered for public subscription by G. L. Ohrstrom & Co., Inc., Brown Brothers & Co., and Coffin & Burr, Inc. These notes are priced at 99½ and accrued interest, to yield about 6.05 per cent.

LOWER TREND FOR PRICES IN LONDON MARKET

Gilt-Edged Issues Easier—Paris Is Seller of Rio Tinto

By Special Cable

Copyright 1929. All Rights Reserved.

LONDON—The effect of the bank rate reduction on the stock markets was short lived, and the gilt-edge issues are now easier, with War Loan a shade under par. The general tone was dull and the internationals were marked down to a basis of parity with New York prices.

Brazilian stocks were weaker on a further fall of the milreis to 5 7-16, and uneasiness with regard to the maintenance of debt service. This morning's rumor that service on one Brazilian loan was not forthcoming has since been denied. The Brazil 1914 funding loan which was 76 yesterday is now 73. Brazilian traction is 39, after being at 45.

Paris selling was responsible for a drop of 21¼ in Rio Tinto to 42¼. The sharp falls in Colombia and in hydros reflect the movement in Wall Street.

Margarines were weak. Royal Dutch was dull, despite the reported extensions of Shell Union in America. Ford Motors were better on the statement that Ford intends to expand and not restrict operations.

Tin was higher at 179⅞, and London tin shares were better. Rubber was 1/8d. higher, but there was no response from the shares.

Markings on the official list yesterday were 5460, compared with 5039 on Dec. 5.

Money was scarce for a Friday, being quoted at 5 per cent for call funds, and extreme stringency seems certain over the end of the year. Discount rates settled down firm at 4 13-16 per cent, which is the average figure for the allotment of today's treasuries and compares with the same rate a week ago.

The Treasury is using the proceeds of prepayments on the Conversion Loan to purchase January and February bills at 4 11-16 per cent. This transaction is unprofitable to the taxpayer, since the prepayment enjoyed a discount of 5 per cent, but the alternative to this operation would be heavier borrowing next week from the Bank of England than is desirable.

Unconfirmed reports state that an additional purchase of gold arranged at New York on behalf of the Midland bank makes the total engaged $21,000,000. The market had expected a reduction in the New York Reserve rate yesterday, but in any case it is considered that the margin of ½ per cent of the Bank of England raté over that in United States is adequate under the present circumstances. For after Christmas currency demands are over the Bank of England reserve should look sound.

The reception of the government coal mines bill was unfavorable. It is considered that giving statutory sanction to price fixation and an export subsidy at the expense of home consumers is undesirable, and that the quota method to regulate production is likely to penalize efficiency and hamper rationalization of the industry.

Parliament's attitude is uncertain, but the defeat of the Government on terms involving dissolution would be unwelcome to all parties.

DAILY FEATURES

One Minute Biographies.

Who: ELLEN TERRY.

Where: England.

When: Nineteenth to twentieth centuries.

Why famous: An English actress, one of the shining lights of the modern stage. Her parents were provincial players and their daughter was born while the company was performing in the little town of Coventry. The Terry children were faithful to the theatrical tradition, Ellen having made her stage début at the age of 8, as the boy Mamillius in The Winter's Tale. From that day until 1868, with brief interruptions, she acted with stock companies, finally playing for the first time with Henry Irving in The Taming of the Shrew.

It is primarily as leading lady with Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum Theater, in London, that the world delights to remember Ellen Terry. Indeed it is difficult to imagine Irving's career without the accompanying enchantment of Ellen Terry's personality and dramatic genius. She was all warmth, freshness and spontaneity. By some secret formula, she transformed herself for the time being into Nance Oldfield or Henrietta Maria or Madame Sans-Gêne. Off the stage, too, she was as truly a creature of radiance and naturalness, of generosity and kindliness. To all who knew her, either on or off the stage, she remains a person apart from a world of commonplace.

The list of her Shakespearean parts is a formidable one: she played Ophelia, Portia, Desdemona, Juliet, Beatrice, Viola, Lady Macbeth and others. Some contend she was most supremely suited to one part, some to another. Perhaps the balance of opinion rests with Beatrice, for in common with that heroine it might be said of Ellen Terry that "there was a star danced and under that was (she) born." The stage of today is too little familiar with such dramatic art as was hers.

A Word a Day

Zealous

A "zealous" worker is one, literally, who is "boiling over, consumed with a passion." The word is derived from the Greek ζῆλος (zelos), "fervent rivalry, ardor," an extension of the verb ζέειν (zeein), "to boil, seethe, throb with heat."

Here, then, is a state of consciousness which requires careful watching. In the best sense, it is capable of great good; in another, it can lead precipitously into gross folly. Paul wrote regarding Israel that "they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge." (Romans 10: 2.)

The one who is genuinely zealous for good may be likened to a power plant, for his urge for service has reached the vapor point, and he may figuratively furnish steam to help move many a machine.

Zeal'-ous is accented on the first syllable and is pronounced as though spelled zel'-us, e as in end, u as is circus.

"Forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church." (I Cor. 14: 12.)

The Bells of St. Martin's Swing a New Song

IT WAS midnight. Everything was quiet in the belfry except for a mouse or two that scuttled the dust about with their tiny feet, and squeaked together among the old boards. Outside, on a piece of masonry, a fat pigeon blinked an eye and looked at the moon sailing behind Nelson's column.

The bells ought to have been asleep, but they were not. They were too busy watching the moonlight creeping slowly, slowly up the wall, and thinking of the hundreds of times they had seen it do the same thing in the same way.

"Four hundred and forty-five years, to be exact, since the night I first saw a moon walk up a wall," said one of the oldest bells.

"A long time—a long time," observed the Sanctus Bell very solemnly.

"Before this church took the place of the old one," said the first bell. "Before any of us cracked and were recast, before—"

"I want to swing a tune—I want to swing a tune!" broke in one of the smaller bells.

"You can't swing now," said a larger bell, who had the words, "Good Will towards Men, and in Earth Peace," inscribed on his big side. "It's past midnight and you ought to be asleep."

"I can't sleep. I want to swing," the little bell persisted.

A big bell, with "Prosperity to St. Martin's" on him, gave the little bell a push.

"Listen to your elders and behave yourself," he said.

There was silence for a moment. Then the little bell began again.

"I'm tired of scales and clashes; I'm even tired of 'I owe you five farthings,' we've done it so often. I want to swing a new song, and I want it to be full of happy things."

The other twelve listened. It was certainly an idea.

"I want to swing a song when everyone has come out of their shut-away shops and offices for lunch, so that they can hear properly. Think of swinging something happy out the spire and into the Strand, and round Trafalgar Square, and up St. Martin's Lane!" He paused.

A bell that was inscribed, "Fear God and Honour the King," shook his clapper. "They wouldn't let you. They would say it wasn't proper," he remarked.

"Not proper!" cried the little bell. "Not proper to swing a happy song?"

"We are too old to try new things," observed the Sanctus Bell.

"Nothing-of-the-sort," said the little bell all in one breath. "I've thought of a song we could swing—all of us together, out of the spire and into the streets! It's about packing up troubles, and smiling, and what's the use of worrying, and it never was worth whiling, and things like that."

"It doesn't sound like us a bit," murmured a big bell out of the shadows. "The moon's walked through the roof—let's go to sleep."

The very next day, when the sun was busying himself among the dusty rafters, the bells heard the news.

"It's my tune, it's my tune!" cried the little bell. "It's my packing up your troubles song. I heard her say so, and we are going to swing it just when the people come out for lunch. She's going to chime us from the ringing chamber as soon as she knows the notes properly."

The 12 other bells looked at one another, and then the Sanctus Bell nodded his head wisely.

"We've always done whatever has been required of us, and we will do this," he said. And the rest of the bells nodded in agreement.

And if you happen to be near St. Martin's Church in London on a Wednesday morning you will hear the good old bells swinging all kinds of happy tunes, and you will see the people laughing as they pass.

But she overlooked a long string and Buzzy and I proceeded to have a good time with that!

Home
(From the Evening Bulletin)
Philadelphia

AN ELDERLY couple were threatened with eviction from their homestead, only to be spared that ignominy and hardship in the nick of time, and on Thanksgiving Day by an anonymous benefactor. Thus did fortune come to the rescue of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Eisenhower of Pitman, N. J.

The Eisenhowers had been ordered evicted from their frame homestead for failure to meet payments on a $1000 mortgage, and foreclosure proceedings were instituted by the mortgage holder, who at sheriff's sale recently bought in the property for $50.

The plight of the elderly pair brought offers of other homes, yet they could not bear to leave the dwelling they had skimped to buy and which has been their home for 20 years.

But Thanksgiving Day was to have real meaning for them and the instrument of cheer and peace was Morton C. Haight, a Pitman attorney and counsel for the mortgage holder in the foreclosure proceedings.

An unknown benefactor authorized Mr. Haight to inform the Eisenhowers that he would buy in their property, valued at $4000, and that they may make it their home without paying taxes or interest. The benefactor will also bear the expense of repairs.

The old couple would like personally to thank their benefactor, but he has withheld his name.

London

WE HAVE always liked London bus drivers and conductors, and now we know that we were right.

More than 100 of them gave their services the other day to take 8000 East End children to Epping Forest.

Most of the children saw the country for the first time, and pointed out cows to one another as excitedly as if the beasts had been rhinos. There were sports and prizes and a sumptuous tea, all provided by the Transport Workers' Union, and then a happy 8000 went singing home to bed in the slums.

War Begins on the Submarine

THE sudden decision of the Italian Government to throw its support toward the abolition of the submarine is all the more welcome because of its unexpectedness. As a traditional proponent of undersea craft, Italy becomes the most effective spokesman for their abandonment. In making known Italy's new position, Dino Grandi, Foreign Minister, gives assurance that the Italian delegation will enter the Five-Power Naval Conference prepared to back the growing movement against the submarine, with the result that a project which a few years ago, if not indeed a few months ago, looked hopeless, today takes on new prospects of success.

The world is ready for the abolition of the submarine. Its record in time of war has been one of barbarity and piracy. It has proved itself a menace and a destroyer of innocent people. Its record in time of peace has been one of recurring tragedy. Time and again has it sacrificed the lives of its crew, and time and again has it sacrificed those who have been sent to salvage its helpless hulk from the bottom of the sea. The submarine is without commercial value. It serves humanity in no constructive capacity. The purposes to which it has been put in time of war and its futility in time of peace make its existence indefensible.

The Five-Power Naval Conference offers an ideal opportunity to make effective this growing conviction that the submarine should be outlawed. Great Britain was one of the earliest nations to announce its willingness to abolish undersea craft. The United States, itself the possessor of a larger number of submarines than any other nation, has likewise announced its readiness to join in their total elimination.

The circumstances which heretofore have prompted the French Government to insist on the retention of the submarine are today fundamentally altered. Manifestly France's most critical naval concern is in the Mediterranean, and the very willingness of the Italian Government to renounce the submarine places France in a better position to pursue a corresponding policy. Moreover, under the Pact of Paris the submarine in all naval calculations must be estimated as a protective weapon, and when France comes to safeguarding communications with her colonial possessions, it is apparent that the airplane will provide an equal if not a more effective instrument of defense.

While the official attitude of Japan is yet to be expressed, there is sound reason to believe that the Japanese delegation will lend its support to the abandonment of the submarine when such renunciation is made the common policy of all naval powers.

The submarine is destructive in war and destructive in peace; its abolition will be a service to humanity.

The Weather Man's Next Job

THE heavy storm that has swept over the north Atlantic during the last week, battering shipping from Sable Island, N. S., to the coast of France, bears a renewed challenge to men's progress in mastering the weather. More than threescore vessels have been either sunk or badly damaged. Britain has experienced the most severe gales on record and the English Channel has been whipped into almost unprecedented turbulence.

Yet not all vessels have fared ill; nor has all of the storm's heroism been in vain. Many of the great steamships, momentarily baffled, have been delayed or forced back into port. Others with their precious cargoes have come through with safety. There is much evidence of increasing ability to withstand such tempests as the result of the development of the shipbuilder's and the navigator's arts.

It is not necessary to go beyond the period of written history to find a time when men were veritable pawns before the vagaries of the weather. Their first effort was to gain some measure of physical protection which increased as construction practices improved. Then followed an effort to anticipate weather changes as observation proved that conditions varied according to an ordered scheme rather than because of the whims of some mythical individual.

The first predictions were little more than guesses, but as meteorological science developed they gained in accuracy and scope. Research in the "weather factories" of the arctic and the antarctic is expected to add greatly to meteorological knowledge and to permit longer advance forecasts than now are possible.

The ultimate development of completely accurate weather forecasting may reasonably be anticipated. With this in view, the next logical step would be that of exerting at least some measure of control over the elements. Certainly this is no more fantastic than the idea of weather forecasting would have been to the navigator of 300 years ago. It is difficult to imagine what the Phœnician sailors would have thought of the idea of complete weather reports covering the Atlantic—a vast ocean the extent of which they had not even guessed.

Despite the fact that since the earliest times there have been efforts to plumb the storm's caldron, the science of meteorology has developed only within the last century and a half. Its "modern" beginnings probably do not antedate the first weather maps which Chevalier de Lamark based upon the records of his pioneer observations. Thus the weather has been removed from the sphere of superstition into that of accurate physical knowledge. This may well be regarded as only the preface to the far more important task of controlling the elements themselves.

Aiding Worthy Benefactions

AMERICANS who have for years supported philanthropies, publications, institutions and other causes are now called upon to show the genuineness of their loyalty. As a result of their past generosity, various organizations of this type have built up competent staffs, started on enlarged activities, and mapped out far-reaching programs. Suddenly, just before the time when a generous flow of subscriptions from members and supporters is normally expected, a debacle occurs in the stock market. Many persons on whom these institutions count grow timid. There is thus a possibility that plans, carefully developed, must be postponed, and that money already expended will go to waste because operations are curtailed.

Those who have given to such causes in the past have done so out of a sense of devotion which must not fail when put to the acid test. Many must confess that it was comparatively easy in the last few years to toss off a small amount in support of some social project. It was generous, yes; but did it involve any real sacrifices? In any event, to most it has not meant that genuine deprivation of things, small or large, which may in some instances be necessary this year. There is a deep, inward joy that comes from knowing that with our mites we are bringing happiness to others or are striving for social purposes in common with a privileged group who have similar ideals. True satisfaction will be the greater if we maintain worthy benefactions, or even increase them, and thus enable the various fellowships of service and enlightenment throughout the country to continue their valuable work.

The Young Plan Still Workable

THE practical effect of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht's attack on the Young plan as modified at the Hague conference, and on the financial policy of the German Government, will probably not be serious. It is quite unlikely that it will greatly influence the German referendum, which will from all appearances result in the discomfiture of Dr. Alfred Hugenberg and other opponents of the reparations settlement.

Nevertheless, this diatribe cannot be dismissed as negligible. Here is one of the signatories of the Young plan already asserting that it is unworkable. Why, then, did he sign it? He explains that, as framed, it represented the maximum effort, but Germany has since been overcharged by other financial obligations which it is not in a position to assume. Germany renounces the surplus arising from the overlapping of the Dawes and Young plans, and the unprotected annuity is increased. Great Britain is blamed for refusing to restore seized property. The proposed agreement with Poland is to the financial detriment of Germany. So are the proposals of the Paris committee for liquidation of the past. Again, the agreement with Belgium regarding compensation for paper marks issued during the war adds to Germany's liabilities. Generally, the Young plan is no longer the Young plan.

If all this were taken literally, it would appear that the reparations problem is once more thrown into the melting pot and the work of the experts at Paris and the conclusions of the statesmen at The Hague rendered nugatory. This would be a prospect which it might be difficult to face with equanimity. Happily, there is no reason to believe that, in fact, the comparatively trivial modifications which have been fully examined and deliberately made put the Young plan out of gear. Nor is there any reason to believe that the German Government and people share the apprehension of the official who has made this amazing declaration. On the contrary, the Government has sternly rebuked the Reichsbank chief for assuming functions of doubtful legality and unquestionable inopportuneness. The German press has commented unfavorably on Dr. Schacht, whom it plainly accuses of political ambitions. This charge of entertaining political ambitions is not new. It receives some confirmation in Dr. Schacht's animadversions on the Socialist Finance Minister, which have more domestic implications. It is not, however, for others to judge Dr. Schacht's motives, which must be assumed to be sincere. But it is necessary to calculate the consequences in the international field.

Now, although there is good ground for anticipating fulfillment of the program as laid down at the Hague conference, Dr. Schacht's pronouncement naturally enough revives misgivings, especially in France, of Germany's financial intentions. It weakens confidence in the execution of the Young plan. It makes the Saar negotiations more difficult. It may even affect the placement of bonds among the public. In short, it undermines the good work recently accomplished, and is, therefore, highly regrettable. But this mistrust will soon be allayed if the referendum proves abortive and if a final agreement is reached in January at The Hague. It may even be that in exposing the feebleness of the opposition to the Young plan both Dr. Hugenberg and Dr. Schacht have stimulated and reinforced the determination for a complete and immediate liquidation of the war.

A Radio Dictatorship of Taste?

JOHN GALSWORTHY'S recent condemnation of radiocast criticism of plays cannot fail to command wide attention. Dramatic criticism over the wireless, the author of the Forsyte Saga is reported to have declared, virtually establishes a dictatorship of dramatic taste and, in the person of the critic, creates an "autocrat of the stage" whose views may make or mar a play. And since the public is, in Mr. Galsworthy's opinion, "prone to take the easiest way of finding out what to go to," radiocast criticism is peculiarly apt, he believes, to influence the actions of playgoers and, in the spheres of art, music and literature, to set up "dictatorships of literary, musical and artistic taste." This concern is shared by several other English playwrights.

Yet, in the related fields of literature and music, it is a well-known fact, acknowledged by authors, librarians and musicians in England, that criticism over the wireless has, far from injuring the interests of modern authors and musicians, actually awakened in the listening public a desire for a more intimate acquaintance with the works discussed by wireless critics, without, it may be added, in any way perceptibly diminishing the influence of book reviewers and musical critics on the newspaper reading public. And while it is incontestable that the listening public is much larger than the reading public of any single newspaper, it is considerably smaller than the newspaper reading public as a whole. The radio, though it may usurp some of the functions of the newspaper, cannot displace it altogether.

Already radiocast programs are overburdened, and the chief problem of radiocast corporations is how to cut them down still more. The wireless critic, whether literary, dramatic or musical, has too little time at his disposal to set up as a dictatorship of taste, and is likely to get even less time in the future. And although he can awaken an interest in drama, music or literature in people whose tastes for the theater, the concert hall, or even the bookstall, are rather primitive, he is hardly likely to influence, let alone warp, the judgment of the real lover of plays, or books, or music.

Found: One High-Class Subway

SUBWAYS are not often mislaid. One may forget for the moment what he did with his hat, but to lose remembrance of the existence of a great traffic tunnel is at least unusual. Not ordinarily located, however, so that anybody can either tumble over it or tumble into it, a tunnel may remain in hiding for a great many years without being discovered.

A lost tunnel, or a mislaid tunnel, or a forgotten tunnel—whatever one may desire to call it—recently was brought to light in New York City. This particular subway had no particular motive in hiding itself. So far as known, it never has moved from its original location. Therefore, it could not be accused of having run away. It was found just where it was put something like eighteen to nineteen years ago. It seems that back in 1911 it was proposed to build a subway on Lexington Avenue. To this end a contract was awarded for the building of a section from Twenty-sixth to Forty-second Streets, and the work was pursued for two years, when it was abandoned for the dual system plan by which the Interborough took over both east and west side lines.

And now a subway storage yard from Twenty-seventh Street and Lexington Avenue to Thirty-third Street is proposed. This would necessitate a subway spur over the same route. Discussion of the project brought to memory that there was "a lot of diggin' going on" in that neighborhood some years ago. Investigation revealed that a section of tunnel was built between 1911 and 1913, and that if the present scheme is carried out its availability may mean the saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the city.

Protecting 'Middle Age' in Uruguay

CONCERNED over the problem—increasingly the subject of attention in many countries—of men who are unable to find work because, at middle age, they are considered "too old," Uruguay has decreed that 10 per cent of the employees on its government and public utility pay rolls must be forty-five or more.

Commendable in intent, significant as indicating recognition of an increasingly formidable problem, the decree nevertheless in effect is a mere gesture, accomplishing nothing. Uruguayan figures are lacking, but even after due discount has been made for dissimilarities, it is probable that Uruguay's situation is comparable to that of the United States, where, according to government statistics, 28.3 per cent of all persons gainfully occupied are more than forty-five years of age. In view of known facts, it is reasonable to assume that Uruguayan conditions in this respect compare with those of the United States rather than with those, let us say, of Mexico, where young men overwhelmingly predominate in technical and governmental positions. The Uruguayan decree, therefore, designates a minimum considerably below that actually obtaining.

The problem of the middle-aged man is going to demand more serious consideration, in Uruguay, in the United States, and elsewhere, than is accorded to it by this decree (it is, moreover, problematical whether a solution can be achieved through governmental agencies). A social system that has achieved "efficiency" of such a character as to require virtually indiscriminate discarding of men while they are at the height of their powers is patently defective, presenting a situation that demands attention and remedy.

If an elephant on Mars showed up the size of a toothpick through the present largest telescope, its size through the 200-inch instrument now under construction would be increased to that of a two-foot ruler. While elephants may not inhabit Mars, the comparison indicates the added visibility that will be attained with the telescope being built for the California Institute of Technology.

On Being Bostonian

OUR first impression of Faversham Todd proved to be one of those abstractions that are peculiarly indelible. It is impossible, even at this date, to think of Faversham without a towel wrapped around his neck. Not that he presented himself to Marlborough Street in any such regalia, nor, indeed, that we ever saw him so informally attired. But his hair, parted precisely in the middle, was so immovably plastered over his temples that the necessity of a protection for the enameled stiffness of his high collar seemed to become at first sight a foregone conclusion. And that is all there was appreciable of Faversham Todd at the moment—that is, except his paramount ambition, which was to become a Bostonian.

Homer Scrimm and I were occupying bachelor apartments and had pasted our cards on the vestibule wall, enlisted the regular attentions of a newsboy, rigged up an antenna on the roof, alienated (at least in part) the loyalty of a neighbor's cat, and otherwise instituted our presence. We even had a number of acquaintances.

But living in Marlborough Street had not been exciting. The flashing motors always took the Avenue to town, and while an occasional band might be heard somewhere off in the maze of other streets, parade nor pageant, it seemed, would ever put to rout the quiet pervading our cloistered aisle.

In that, of course, there was a certain charm. But living in Marlborough Street, it will bear repeating, had not been exciting. Indeed, I have to confess we had taken to that old, old game, which is supposed to be exclusively for unoccupied spinsters, and for which we have since coined the name, "peep-curtain."

It was by their furniture that we estimated the desirability of incoming tenants—comparing their tastes with our own, of course. But, somehow, a certain Mr. Todd evaded our scrutiny. It may have been that Homer was busy inducing feline fickleness to reforsake its native yard for ours (which procedure was an almost daily informality). As for me, I was very likely in the shed, selecting the few sticks most nearly suited to the requirements of our hearth. And Homer was exceedingly particular about the firewood—that the logs should have variety of contour, and be green enough to promise a little music. So it was, we may safely conjecture, that Mr. Todd came into our midst unappraised.

The first contact with our new neighbor resulted from circumstances that were, we regretted, most unfavorable to his establishment as one of a meticulously respectable community. From all appearances he had, without notifying us, entered into negotiations with our (or at any rate our neighbor's) cat. We felt there was no excuse for this, because Mr. Todd was not of the odd-number residents, and might better have restricted such activities to his own side of the street. Hearing midnight whiskings in the closet, and finding in the cheese holes other than those that were meant to be, we decided that correspondence concerning our whimsical protégé must be entered into.

The result of this was Mr. Todd's surrender, or more exactly, his renunciation of our pantry panther.

"I found him on my steps one morning," he explained blandly, "and gave him some milk. I don't know how he came to be there."

Homer, who had considerable experience in attracting His Maltese Majesty from the domain that was originally and (it must be admitted) legally his, had conspicuous doubts regarding Mr. Todd's naïve defense. But I refused to put the new neighbor at so early a disadvantage in Marlborough Street.

Invitations to call were exchanged, and one gray afternoon we three, Todd, Homer and I, sat around the fire in Homer's study. Homer looked very thoughtful, and contented as well, with our (neighbor's) cat perched upon the arm of his chair. Our guest sat between us, his hair again his chief apparent claim to distinction. He had accomplished much toward realizing his ambition. Some of his money was already in copper stocks, his subscription to the Transcript had been accepted, even if his proffered contribution to the Atlantic Monthly had not, and he had ordered a cord of wood from our dealer, specifying that it should be as nearly as possible a replica of the cord which Homer had ordered last season. Homer, whom I knew to be sitting in stern judgment on Faversham Todd, observed that a good beginning had been made.

"But," queried Homer with a sly twinkle in his eyes, "have you acquired a cat?"

Mr. Todd's high collar suddenly appeared very white and cold against the roseate hue of his neck and countenance.

"Why—er—no," the words stuck in his throat, "that is, not yet."

Now cats are not taboo anywhere in New England, either as companions or topics of fireside talk. But I sensed at that moment that the mention of such terms as Persian, Angora, Maltese, or tortoise shell, would always cause Mr. Todd extreme mental anguish. It was time to turn the talk to other things. After floundering around for a while, we were saved from further embarrassment by Homer's distinguishing himself on the trend of the modern theater. I think he even forgot his prejudice against our neighbor. At any rate, it was voted a pleasant and profitable afternoon, and that we meet again soon.

A season had passed and we felt that it was time we were doing something for Faversham. He turned out to be a capital fellow, and never again got caught with our (neighbor's) cat. At Mrs. Palsinghurst's in Louisburg Square, therefore, there assembled a representative enough group to extend to Mr. Todd his initiation.

Well versed in Holmes and Thoreau, aware that Tremont Street is named with a derivation of Tri-mountaine, from the three hills upon which was set the city of St. Botolph, and that the Back Bay, properly speaking, is not such an extensive area as some believe, also that the streets crossing Commonwealth Avenue begin down town with Arlington, and bear names alphabetically ordered, up to Hereford Street, Faversham pushed Mrs. Palsinghurst's bell with no little certainty.

The afternoon moved along as such afternoons do. Four o'clock and all was well. It was almost time for Faversham's informal talk on Old Boston's Streets. At 4:05 Homer came and sat beside me.

"Listen," he whispered, "I haven't seen anything of our cat—"

"Our neghbor's cat," I corrected.

"What's the difference?" he demanded. "I haven't seen him in three weeks."

At 4:15 Mr. Todd had finished his discourse, and was answering questions, engaging in repartee and managing a session of banter and wit, if not wisdom, masterfully.

At 4:16 all was well.

"Any more questions?" asked the beaming Faversham.

At 4:17, an electrified silence; all was over, and none too well. But we are ahead of the story.

Homer, with his thoughts quite preoccupied by the disappearance of our neighbor's cat and the consequent loss of our equity in that domestic asset, had made this attempt to be humorous about it:

"Have you, Mr. Todd, seen anything of a particularly fine Maltese cat while exploring Boston's bypaths?"

For the second time since we had known Faversham, his collar looked very white against his complexion. And Homer saw, too late, what he had done. Faversham's wit staged a fadeout, his bearing was crumbling away, and his hope of being considered Bostonian took wings with his next words.

"I—er—," he said, punctuating his incoherence with audible and visible gulps, "—no, it wasn't on the Commons, it must have been—er—in the Public Gardens I saw him, the other day."

At 4:17, then, there was a silence, tense, electric, ominous—charged with the terrific voltage of those superfluous letters "s." Homer had never looked so dismayed at anything. It was, as I said, all over.

We three went home to Faversham's rooms.

"Look here," said Homer, "I'm exceedingly sorry, Faversham."

"Why," asked Todd in unfeigned innocence, "what's the matter?"

Homer looked at me. I signaled silence. It was just as well our friend did not know.

"About the cat, Faversham," added Homer.

"Oh, I did get a bit flustered. But never mind."

Now that was sportsmanship, but little did Faversham know to what extent. Common—s! Public Garden—s!

"Todd, old man," I said (I hope without too much feeling), "wouldn't you prefer the suburbs to this dry old street?"

"Oh, I should just say I would," was the response, "but how is one to be Bostonian if one lives elsewhere?"

"The suburbs are the Boston of the future, Faversham," I answered with an air of finality, and he was impressed, I am sure, for he said quite earnestly:

"Really?"

Homer reiterated my opinion.

A mere twenty minutes from the hum of traffic on the avenue, from the quiet sameness of Marlborough Street, lies a garden, stands a house. This is the Todds' suburban home. Last night Homer and I were out there to supper. Mrs. Todd was charming—born, brought up and (I use the word emphatically) bred in Boston. The conversation moved blithely over many topics and at last to Faversham's great regard for the city on the Charles.

"But for all that," commented Mrs. Todd, "Faversham will never learn to drop those barbarous letters 's' from the Common and the Garden."

Homer gave me a significant look.

Very often, when seated by our fire, the unchanging silence of Marlborough Street broken only by the soft purring of our neighbor's cat (Faversham has one of his own at last), and the sizzling of the green wood burning, Homer and I have touched upon those letters "s" and wondered—about being Bostonian. And while we have never let it pass our lips, we share, I am sure, an old misgiving. Were not we, ourselves, one Christmas Eve, and by some very important-looking people in a Beacon Hill doorway, heard exclaiming about the Old World charm of Lou-ie-burg Square?

THE King has accepted an invitation to attend the reopening service of St. Paul's Cathedral on June 25, 1930. And so once again Sir Christopher Wren's famous masterpiece, the first stone of which was laid in 1675, and which was finally completed in 1710, will be freed of its ugly scaffolding and will enjoy quiet after the constant noise of workmen's tools. Repair work was started seventeen years ago, and when it is completed nearly £450,000 will have been spent. But no debt faces the Cathedral authorities. Englishmen from all over the world have sent their contributions to the Repair Fund. The Cathedral Chapter states that, for the last fifteen years, collection boxes placed in St. Paul's have obtained on an average £1 a day, making a total of about £6000. Observation showed that the boxes were filled largely by men and women working in the city, or visiting the Cathedral from the Provinces. When the final touches are completed St. Paul's will be safe unless schemes are attempted adjacent to its shallow foundations. And it is stated that if a new bridge, tube, or any large building were engineered in close proximity, the results might be serious.

General Dawes received a pleasant surprise on his return from his recent visit to his home country where, the story is told here, he caused a sensation by appearing in New York wearing an ordinary "butterfly collar" instead of his famous fold-over pattern with the open "V" in front. It is understood that he was obliged to give up his favorite pattern because London shirt and collar makers had never heard of it and did not stock it. But he will no longer have any trouble. "The General can wear any kind of collar he likes," said a representative of a well-known London outfitters. "We will make any shape or size collar he wants if he will only give us a pattern. We don't want all America to think that British outfitters cannot rise to a simple occasion, as is suggested. We'll make him a dozen, or two, or three dozen, and give them to him; in fact, we'll supply him all the time he's in this country." The matter has been taken in hand by the General's secretary and Mrs. Dawes.

It is not an uncommon occurrence for snakes, spiders and so on to be found in consignments of fruit from tropical countries. But recently a rare variety of South American opossum was found in a consignment of fruit from Costa Rica. Catalogued in the library of the London Zoological Society under "Marmosa Cinerea," its full name is "Didelphys Waterhousii." When found the little animal had five young ones. John R. B. Masefield, the author, who saw it, writes that she carried her young on her back with their five little tails curled round her tail for safety. As the mother is only the size of a smallish brown rat, one can imagine what diminutive little things the young must be. The tail was also used for conveying rolled-up parcels of grass and other material collected for her nest.

The collecting of picture post cards was at one time a craze all over Europe, and that it has not yet passed away in Japan is evident from the following letter from a Japanese collector to the Blue Star Steamship Line.

My dear Blue Star Line,

I have colected a steamship of picture postcard. I have not at all largest steamship of picture postcards which the Blue Star Line possesses. If you, the Company, would give me nine or ten largest steamship of picture postcards, I should be much obliged. I shall pleasurably expect to be reach me.

Needless to say, nine or ten largest "steamship of picture postcards" were duly dispatched to the "Colector."

"We have never made any public reference to the fact that the 2LO transmitting point was on our roof," says Selfridge's in announcing the removal of the British Broadcasting Corporation Station from Oxford Street to Brooklands Park. "The great masts towering over 200 feet into the sky were not things which could be hidden," it adds, continuing:

Everyone saw them and everyone asked why they were there. The powerful aerials immediately suggested an explanation. Now that the broadcasts from Brooklands Park have achieved at least the amount of success expected and the adverse criticism has been rather less than would be expected by anyone who knows newspapers, we may anticipate the removal of the great masts and aerials from our roof, and that early in the new year Selfridge's will show the ordinary outline of a place of business. We shall be a little sorry to say a final good-by to 2LO. . . . We liked to feel our building was being of service to millions of listeners. When a speech of national importance, a fine piece of music, an eagerly awaited piece of news, an account of some great exploit was coming through, we would think with pleasure of our great building, in the darkness and the silence, holding aloft the structures through which all the sounds must pass. It was an anonymous service, but sometimes we felt it was a thrilling one. It has been a pleasant relationship. It has been without incident. . . . Now that the infant B. B. C. has grown into something like a giant, and 2LO has had to go out from central London, we say good-by to an interesting episode in our history.
